

YoYo and the Knock at the Door

Ghoda Alani

Close your eyes, my love. Tonight's story is about a little bunny with long ears and a big heart... and now, let's meet our hero, YoYo!

YoYo lives in a cozy, warm burrow with her mama as the golden sun sets gently outside. Soft orange light fills their little home, making everything feel safe and snug.

Mama puts on her little red shawl and whispers that she is going out to pick fresh carrots. She gently reminds YoYo to stay safe inside until she returns.

Suddenly, a sharp knock, knock, knock echoes through the quiet burrow, making YoYo's long ears jump straight up in surprise.

A friendly voice from outside calls out and promises sweet carrot cake if only the door is opened wide.

YoYo's little tummy feels hungry at the thought of cake, but her heart tells her that she does not recognize the voice at all.

Remembering Mama's important rule about never opening the door to strangers, brave little YoYo shakes her head and calls out a polite refusal.

YoYo hurries safely next door to find Grandma Hen and tells her everything that just happened.

Mama returns home safely and wraps her loving arms around YoYo in a big, warm hug, praising her for being so smart and brave.

YoYo fell asleep, safe and happy. Goodnight, my little hero.