

Ugh & Leo: Sparks of History

ANGELA MARIA NAPOLITANO

A TIME-TRAVELING ADVENTURE.
A DISCOVERY THAT CHANGED EVERYTHING.*

A room split down the middle showcases two different worlds in perfect harmony. On the left, Leo sits in his brightly lit modern bedroom filled with colorful posters and a sleek computer desk. On the right, Ugh relaxes inside a cozy prehistoric cave adorned with vibrant charcoal rock paintings of mammoths and hunters.

Leo stands in a dense, primeval forest, holding up a sleek digital tablet that radiates a soft blue light. Emerging from a nearby thicket is Ugh, a young cave-dwelling boy dressed in furry animal skins, staring at the glowing device with wide, amazed eyes.

Leo kneels down enthusiastically on the mossy ground to show Ugh the brightly lit screen of his modern tablet. Fascinated and slightly hesitant, Ugh gently reaches out with one finger to touch the smooth glass, marveling at a source of light that produces absolutely no smoke.

A massive flash of golden lightning strikes a towering ancient tree, splitting the trunk and bursting into fierce, bright orange flames. In the background, a small group of terrified prehistoric humans run away in fear, shielding their eyes from the roaring blaze.

A close-knit tribe of prehistoric people gathers around a small hearth carefully encircled by protective gray stones. A brave tribal guardian holds up a long wooden branch, keeping the precious flame burning bright by gently feeding it dry twigs.

Two strong, weathered hands vigorously spin a hard wooden stick back and forth against a flat, softer piece of timber. A delicate wisp of gray smoke begins to rise from the friction point, gently drifting toward a pile of tinder dry grass.

A sharp piece of dark flint strikes forcefully against a piece of golden pyrite, sending a brilliant shower of bright sparks downward. The glowing sparks land softly on a bed of dried shelf mushrooms, igniting a tiny, warm ember.

Inside a warm, shadowed cave, Ugh's family sits happily together around a crackling campfire while a hearty meal cooks over the flames. Outside the dark cave entrance, a fierce saber-toothed tiger stares longingly from the shadows, deterred by the bright, protective light.

A young prehistoric boy and an older tribal elder stand together near the cave entrance, carefully watching over the glowing coals of their fire. They work as a team, sharing the vital responsibility of keeping the community safe and warm through the night.

Leo begins to softly fade into a shimmering light as his tablet screen glows brightly to transport him back to the year 2026. Ugh smiles warmly and waves goodbye, holding his fire-making stick high in the air as a symbol of their unforgettable cross-time friendship.