

THE GREAT JOURNEY OF THE SHAPES

The Great Journey of the Shapes

Pelus

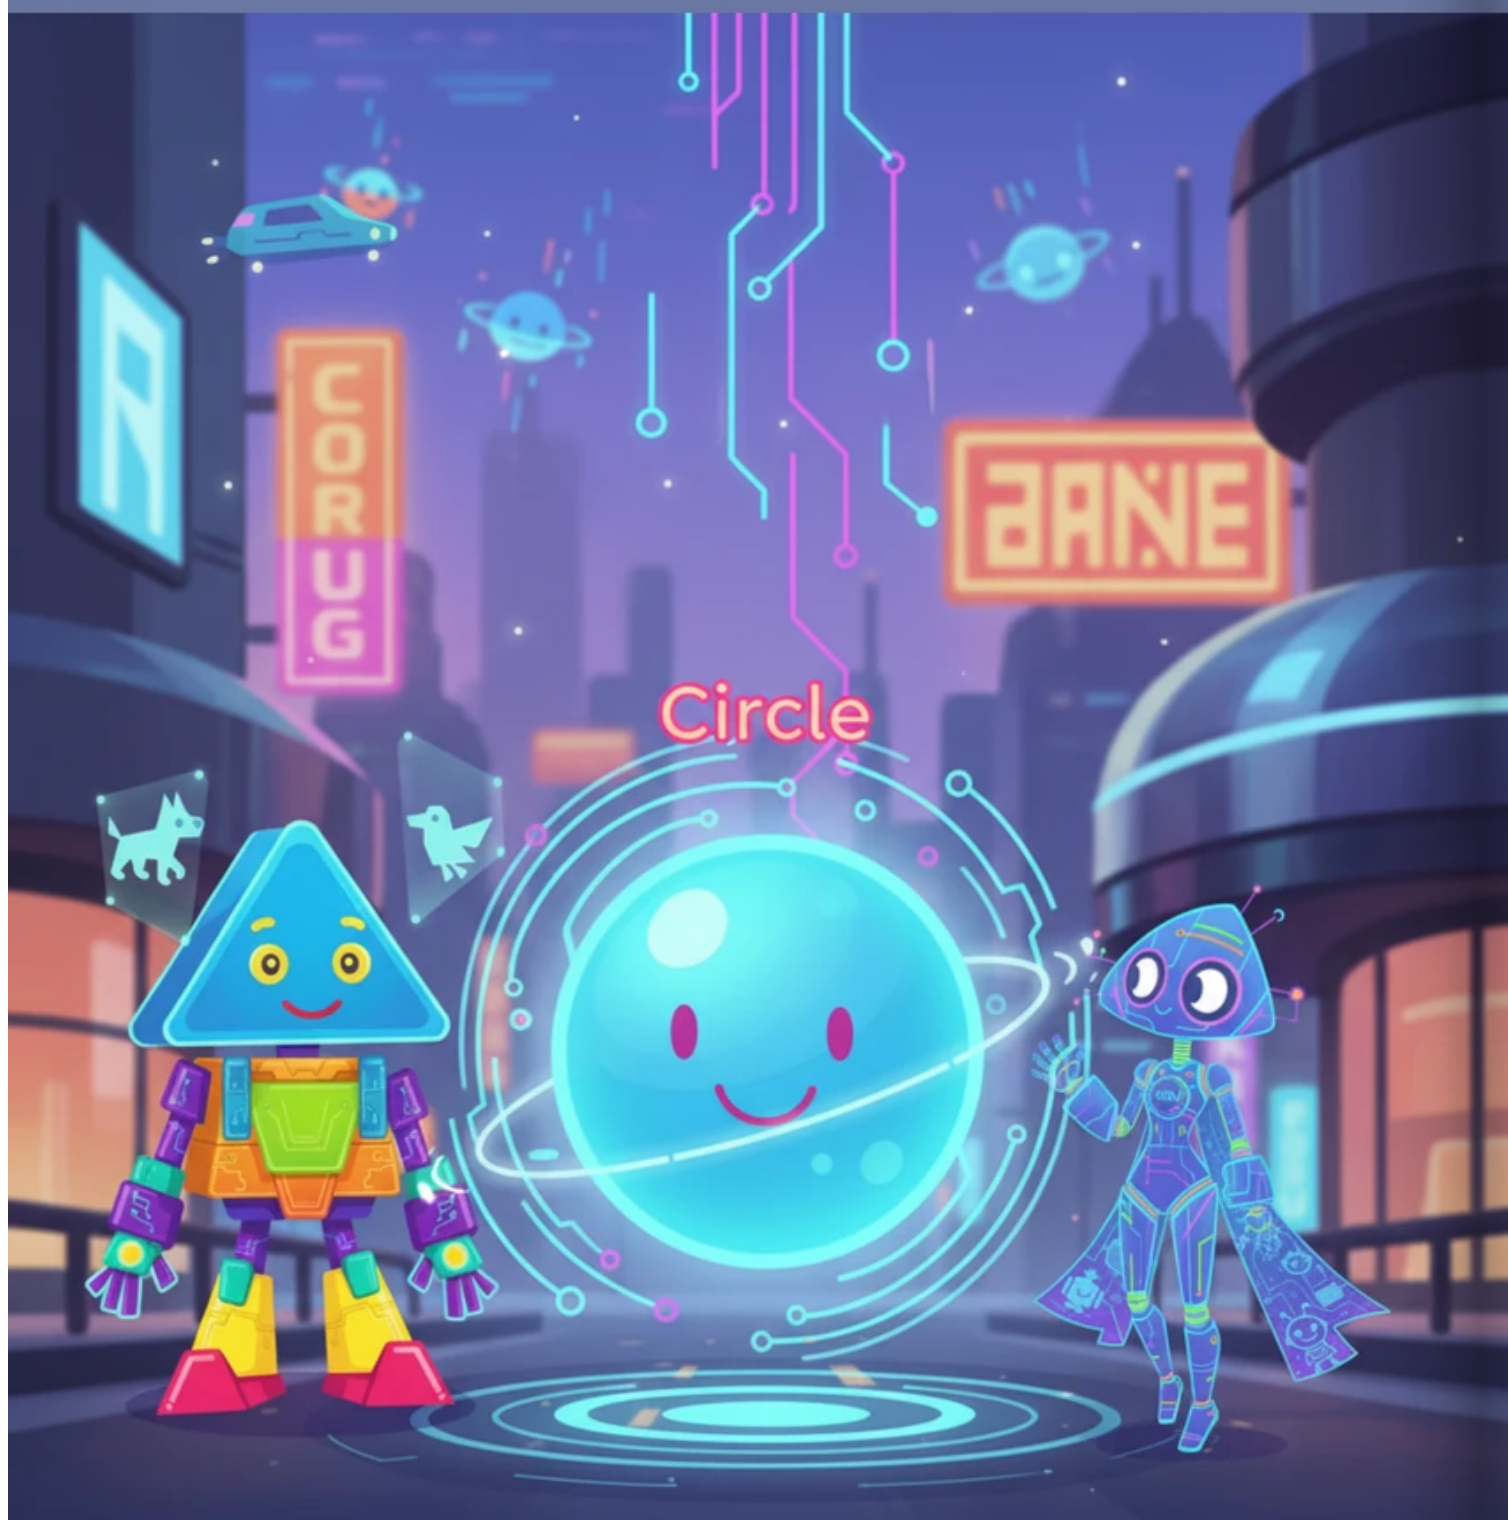

In the center of a vast, silent white canvas lived Dot, a tiny glowing point with a heart full of curiosity. Though he was the smallest thing in existence, he felt a great spark inside, wondering what lay beyond the edges of his empty world.

One morning, a long and elegant figure named Line stretched across the horizon, appearing like a sleek silver ribbon. Dot and Line realized that when they worked together, they could define edges and create paths that led to unknown wonders.

They soon encountered Triangle, a sturdy character standing tall with three sharp peaks and a wide, stable base. Triangle showed them how to be strong and how to reach for the sky, acting as a mountain that could overlook the entire landscape.

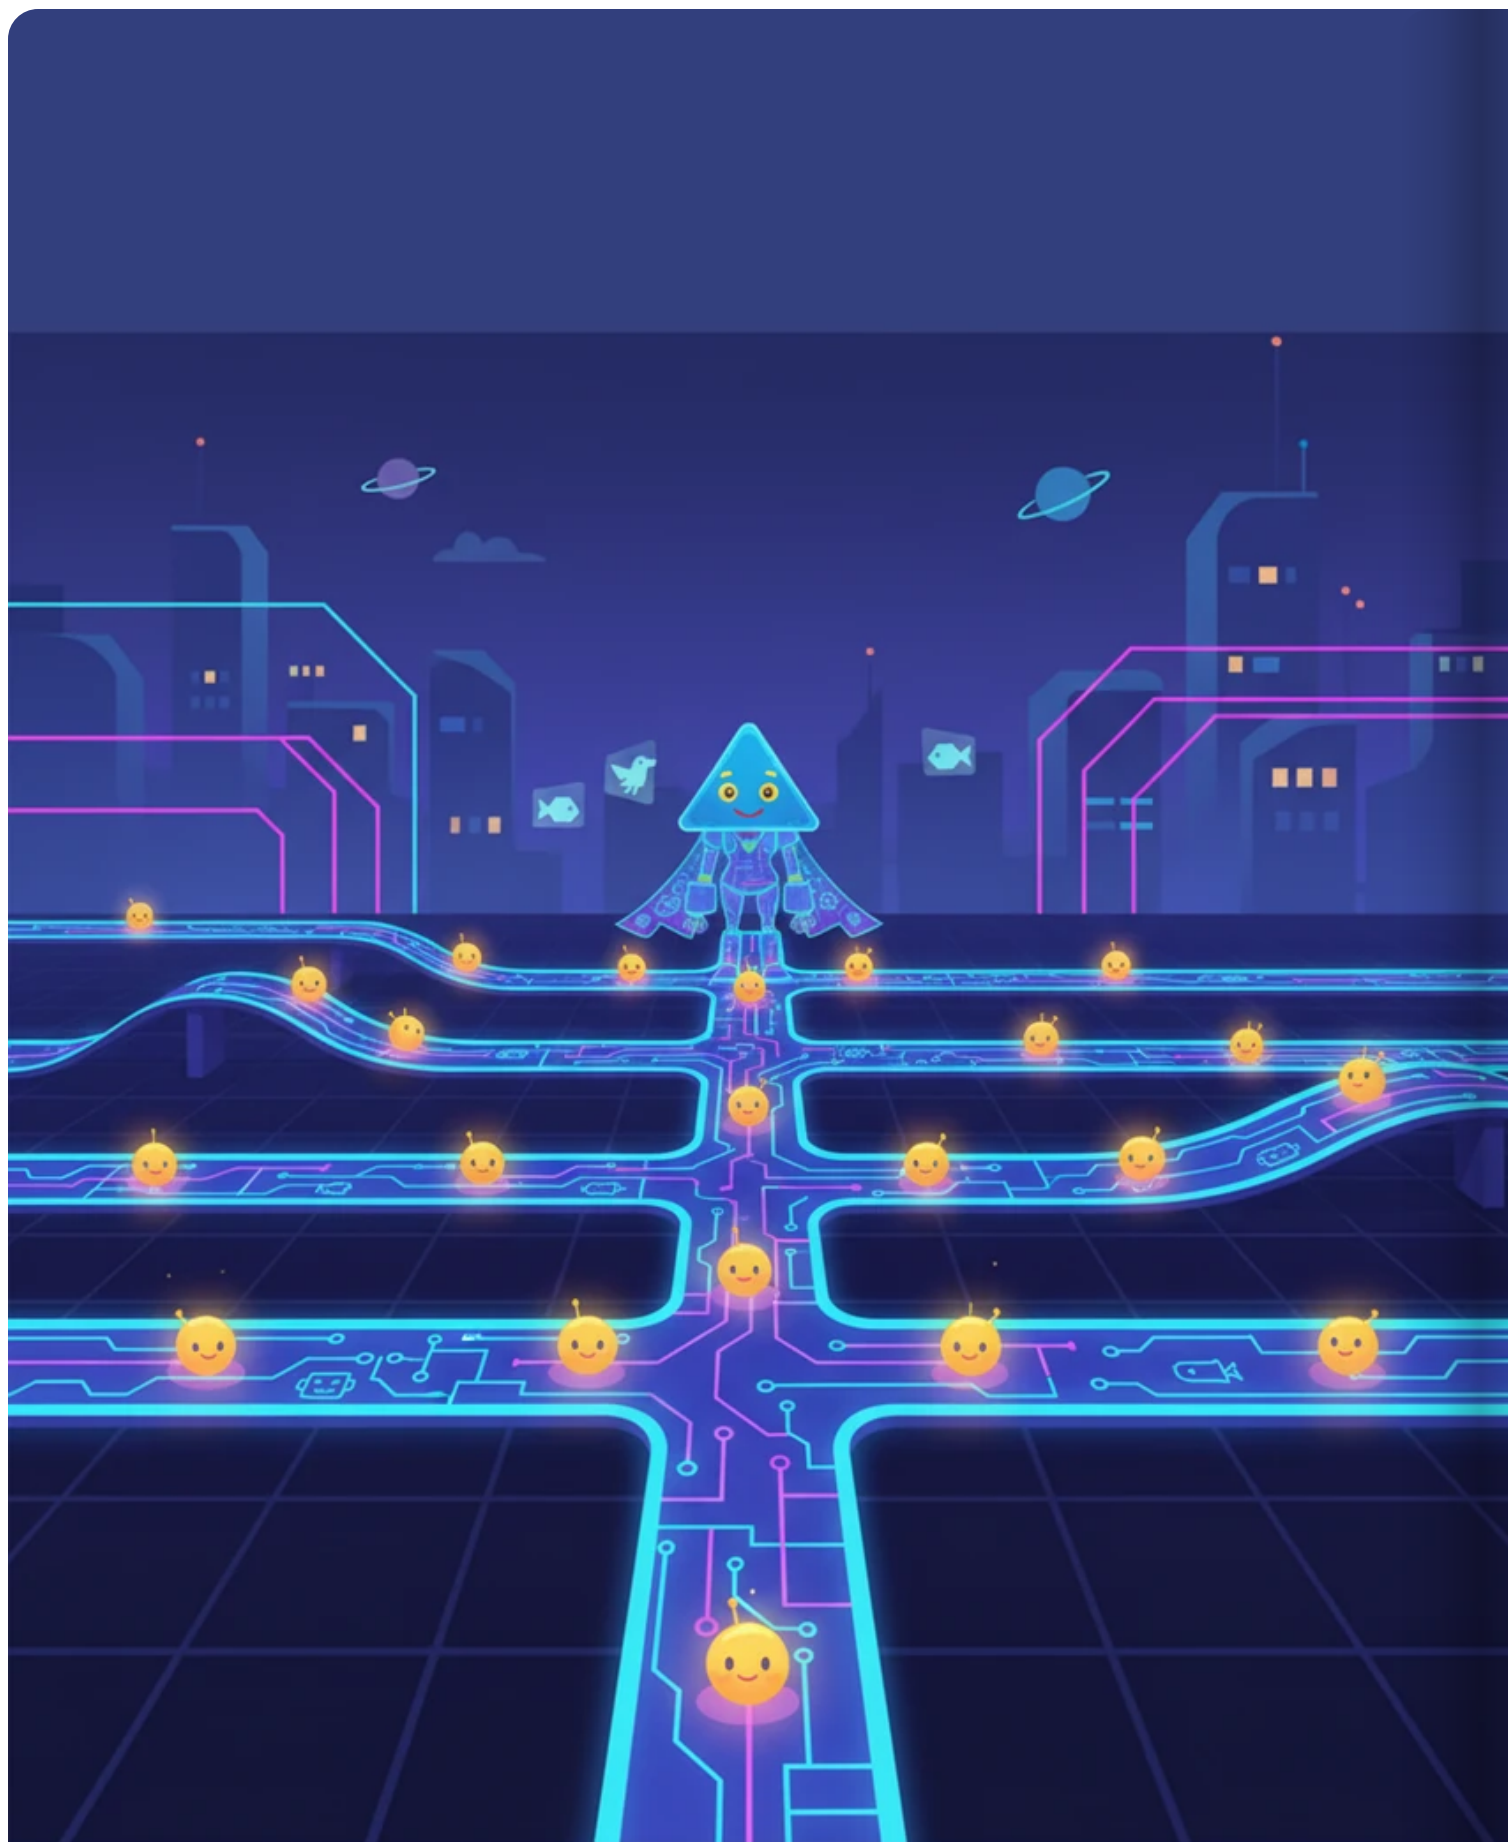

A soft, rolling sound announced the arrival of Circle, a cheerful friend who spun in endless loops without ever stopping. Circle brought the gift of movement and harmony, showing the others that life doesn't always have to be straight or pointy.

The four friends gathered together and decided to use their unique powers to build a vibrant world from scratch. They realized that Dot's precision, Line's direction, Triangle's strength, and Circle's flow were the perfect ingredients for creation.

They arrived at a place filled with messy, tangled scribbles that felt confusing and lacked any order. Together, they began to untangle the mess, replacing the chaos with organized patterns and beautiful, repeating sequences of shapes.

Line laid herself down to become smooth roads and sturdy bridges, while Dot sat at every corner to mark the way for future travelers. The empty canvas began to look like a map, full of possibilities and connections between distant places.

Triangle multiplied himself to create the roofs of colorful houses and the tall, pointed trees of a growing forest. His steady form provided shelter and safety, making the new world feel like a secure home for everyone.

Circle bounced into the sky to become a warm, golden sun that bathed everything in light, and later, a glowing silver moon. She also became the wheels of the wagons, allowing the friends to travel through their beautiful new creation with ease.

The once-empty page was now a masterpiece of geometry, filled with mountains, cities, and life in every corner. Dot and his friends stood together, proud of the harmonious world they had built by combining their different shapes into one beautiful whole.