

The Great Treasure of Alt Empordà

Judit Muñoz

Leo and Clara stand happily with their parents, Maria and Josep, and their grandparents, Lila and Carles. They are in front of their beautiful stone house in the sunny Alt Empordà countryside, surrounded by green fields and blooming flowers.

In the garden, Grandpa Carles spreads an old, yellowed treasure map on a wooden table. Leo and Clara lean in close with wide eyes, feeling very excited to start a real adventure in their own backyard.

Clara pedals her bicycle along a winding dirt path while Leo walks quickly beside her, carefully checking the map. The bright sun shines over the wildflowers and the tall mountains in the distance.

Along the way, the children spot a small brown rabbit stuck in a prickly bush. Leo and Clara gently help the little animal get free, and the happy rabbit hops away into the tall green grass.

The trail leads them into a cool forest where sunlight dances through the leaves of the tall trees. They stop at a wooden signpost to read a mysterious clue that tells them to head toward the salty sea air.

Leo and Clara arrive at a golden beach on the Costa Brava, where the blue waves gently lap at the shore. They search through the sand until Clara spots something shiny hidden near a group of colorful seashells.

Using their hands, they dig up a small wooden treasure chest buried near the cliffs. They look at each other with big smiles, wondering what wonderful secrets might be hidden inside the old box.

Back at home, the whole family gathers around the kitchen table to see what they found. Instead of gold, the chest is filled with old family photos, colorful drawings, and Grandma Lila's secret recipes.

Clara starts painting a bright picture of their adventure while Leo sits nearby reading a book about the history of Catalonia. The room is filled with warmth and the smell of delicious food cooking in the kitchen.

The family enjoys a wonderful dinner together, sharing stories and laughter under the evening sun. Leo and Clara realize that the best treasure of all is spending a beautiful day together in Alt Empordà.
