

Leo's Golden Divide

Guru SG

Leo was the brightest, roundest orange in the entire sun-drenched orchard, clinging happily to a leafy branch.

Suddenly, a powerful gust of wind rushed through the leaves, splitting Leo perfectly down the center in a surprise burst.

One half, holding the leafy stem, tumbled gently down and came to rest in a soft bed of green grass.

Looking up through the canopy, Leo-Top could see his other half glistening high above, still swaying in the breeze.

A little black ant scurried over, gazing at the exposed, juicy segments with wide eyes, asking what had happened.

A curious ladybug and a shiny beetle joined the ant, marveling at the unique form of the lone orange half in the wild grass.

From his new spot, Leo-Top noticed tiny details of the ground he had never seen before, like the moss and the pattern of ladybug spots.

High in the tree, Leo-Bottom enjoyed the vastness of the blue sky and felt the warm afternoon sun, a feeling Leo-Top missed.

A playful squirrel discovered Leo-Top, carefully picking him up like a bright treasure and carrying him on a new journey.

As he traveled, Leo-Top understood that while separated, he and his other half shared the same spirit and different, beautiful experiences of their sunny world.
