The Sharma Family's Happy Sunday

Shadiya Bano

In a charming little town lived the Sharma family: grandparents, parents, and two playful children, Rohan and Pinky. Everyone was quite busy with their daily routines, but their home always buzzed with cheerful energy.

Sundays, however, were truly special. On this day, the whole family would gather to eat a warm meal together and share endless stories and laughter. It was their precious time filled with joy and love.

One Sunday, Grandma, with a mischievous twinkle in her eye, suggested, "Today, let's spend time without any mobile phones!" Everyone looked a bit puzzled, as if their favorite toys had suddenly been taken away.

After a moment of quiet, Grandpa began telling hilarious stories from his childhood. His voice was full of magic, and his tales were bursting with playful mischief and unforgettable adventures.

Soon, Dad shared funny anecdotes from his school days, and Mom brought out old family photo albums. Each picture sparked a new story, making Rohan and Pinky roll on the floor with uncontrollable laughter.

As evening approached, everyone decided to make tea together in the kitchen. Rohan and Pinky happily helped with little tasks like arranging cups and fetching biscuits, feeling like important chefs.

Afterward, they all went into the garden to play a variety of games. Ludo, carrom, and singing games filled the air with laughter and joyful shouts. The sun slowly set, painting the sky in warm orange hues.

Rohan and Pinky realized how wonderful it felt to spend time with their family away from mobile screens. It wasn't just about the games; it was about the warmth of love and belonging.

That day, everyone's hearts grew even closer. They listened to each other's stories, laughed together, and created precious, unforgettable memories. This Sunday truly became a special one.

From that day forward, the Sharma family decided that every Sunday would be "Family Day." They understood that true happiness comes from spending quality time with each other, not from screens.
