

Jacob's Brave New World

Dewi Aulia31

Jacob, a fluffy doll with long arms and googly eyes, sits quietly with his siblings. Pang, the button-eyed prankster, is sneaking up on him while wise Chatrel watches over them with a gentle smile.

A young boy with a kind face discovers the trio and carefully places them into his collection bag. Jacob tenses up at the touch, but the soft presence of Pang and Chatrel beside him helps him stay brave.

They arrive at a bright, sunlit room filled with shelves of toys. As they are set down, Jacob looks around nervously, his long arms wrapped around himself to avoid being bumped by the other residents.

A charming toy named Max approaches with a confident wink and a playful comment that makes Jacob's googly eyes widen in annoyance. While Max is clearly smitten, Jacob just wants to find a quiet corner to call his own.

The memory of rough hands from the past flickers in Jacob's mind, making him tremble with the fear of being torn apart. Chatrel softly leans against him, her calm presence acting as an anchor that prevents him from snapping in frustration.

When the house grows quiet at night, the siblings decide it is time to see what lies beyond the bedroom door. Pang leads the way with a mischievous grin, eager to see what secrets the dark hallway holds.

Their path is suddenly blocked by a massive, snoring ginger cat stretched across the doorway like a furry mountain. The siblings stop in their tracks, unsure how to bypass the sleeping giant without waking it.

Jacob tries to act tough, stepping forward to protect his siblings, but his googly eyes quiver at the sight of the cat's sharp claws. Max appears from the shadows, offering a reassuring smile that for once doesn't feel like a tease.

Working together, Max uses a colorful feather to distract the cat while Jacob and his siblings slip quietly through the gap. Max watches Jacob's brief, relieved smile, feeling a spark of genuine joy just to see his friend happy.

The group reaches the top of the stairs, looking out at the moonlit living room together. Though Jacob still prefers his personal space, he realizes that with his siblings and Max by his side, the world isn't so scary after all.
