

Liam and Mia's Whispering Garden

Clément BOSC

Meet five-year-old Liam and three-year-old Mia, who spent many sunny afternoons playing in the garden with their mother. She taught them to whisper stories to the butterflies and hug the old oak tree, filling their world with laughter and love.

One morning, the house was unusually quiet and the sunshine felt distant. Dad gathered Liam and Mia close, explaining softly that Mommy was very sick and had to go to a place far away, becoming a beautiful light in the sky.

The children struggled to understand why Mommy wasn't coming home, and their small hearts felt heavy and empty. They looked at her pictures, trying to remember the warmth of her hugs, feeling very sad and confused.

The days became lonely as Dad tried to juggle work and home, his own heart full of sorrow. The garden overgrown and silent, mirroring the loneliness in the house, where every corner seemed to whisper her name.

While exploring an old dusty trunk in the attic, Liam found an colorful, half-full tin box labeled 'Mommy's Garden Whispers.' Inside were small paper packets and notes, all about magical seeds and flower wishes.

Inspired, they decided to make the garden bloom again, just like Mommy wanted, thinking of it as a way to share secrets with her. Dad joined in, his hands in the soil, helping them plant seeds of sunflowers, lavender, and sweet-smelling roses.

Slowly, tiny green sprouts began to poke through the earth, catching the warm sunlight, and a spark of excitement returned to the children's eyes. They watered their new plants faithfully, telling stories to the growing leaves.

One particularly bright morning, Liam found an old pair of gardening gloves that perfectly matched a drawing in the tin. Underneath a loose brick, he discovered a small wooden cross-stitch Mom had made for them: 'Love Blooms Forever.'

The garden was soon a colorful paradise, humming with life, butterflies, and a sense of sweet peace. Dad held them both, smiles finally returning to all their faces as they remembered all the happy times they shared with Mom there.

Looking up at the starry sky after a day of play, Liam and Mia felt certain that Mommy was watching and smiling down on them, happy they were together. Their home was once again filled with love and hope, ready for a future of bright, beautiful days, knowing that her love would always be with them.