

LEO'S TIDY ADVENTURE

Leo's Tidy Adventure

Natalie Brits

Leo was a super speedy little boy who loved to zoom around his room, playing with all his toys! His bright red car raced past a tower of blocks, while his cuddly bear watched from a pile of books. Every day was an adventure, filled with imagination and fun.

"Leo, my little whirlwind!" his mom called with a smile, peeking into his room. "It's time to put away your toys and make your bed before we go to the park." Leo let out a big sigh, his shoulders slumping like a sad balloon. He just wanted to play, not tidy!

Leo tried to ignore the messy floor and build a magnificent castle for his action figures. But oh dear, his favorite shiny knight was nowhere to be found! He rummaged through a mountain of clothes and a sea of scattered puzzle pieces, feeling more frustrated than playful.

As the day went on, Leo's room grew even messier, like a playful storm had swept through. His toy train was derailed by a runaway sock, and his coloring books were buried under a sleepy blanket. It was getting harder and harder to find anything, let alone play properly.

He tried to play hide-and-seek with his giggling puppy, Pip, but Pip kept tripping over the jumbled toys. Even his cozy reading nook was covered in crayons and crumpled drawings. Leo's happy face slowly turned into a grumpy frown.

Leo sat down with a huff, looking around at the chaos. His favorite stuffed elephant, Ellie, looked a little squished under a pile of clothes, and his bright blue ball was completely lost. It felt like his toys were whispering, "We miss our proper places!"

Suddenly, Leo had a brilliant idea! He couldn't play his best if his room was a muddle. With a determined wiggle, he decided to start small. He picked up his red car and carefully placed it in its toy box.

One by one, Leo gathered his blocks, tucked his books onto the shelf, and even smoothed out his bed. Pip wagged his tail happily, nudging a stray sock towards the laundry basket. Leo worked with a focus he hadn't known he had!

Soon, the room transformed! The floor was clear, the bed was neat, and all the toys were snuggled in their homes. Sunlight streamed through the window, making everything sparkle. Leo stood tall, a big, proud smile stretching across his face.

Now, with a clean and tidy room, playing was even more fun! Leo and Pip had plenty of space to chase each other, and he easily found his shiny knight to lead the castle adventure. He realized that a little tidying made a whole lot of happy playtime!