Respect and Safety

BATHROOMS

Sometimes during the school day, Leo needs to use the bathroom. It is a very important place that helps keep his body healthy and comfortable. The bathroom is also a place where everyone deserves privacy, respect, and safety.

When Leo goes to the bathroom, he walks quietly and calmly down the school hallway. If someone else is already using the bathroom, he waits patiently for his turn. He always remembers to be respectful of others.

Inside the bright, clean bathroom, Leo makes sure to keep his hands, feet, and body safe. He knows that the toilets and urinals are for using the bathroom only. He keeps his feet firmly on the floor and never climbs, stands, or sits on top of them.

Climbing on bathroom fixtures can be very dangerous and can hurt his body. It can also break the bathroom parts, like the toilets or sinks. Broken bathrooms can cause big problems for the whole school and his friends.

Leo understands that the pipes, sinks, toilets, and walls all help the bathroom work the right way. He keeps his hands and feet to himself to protect them. This means he does not kick pipes, hit walls, splash water, or play games in the bathroom.

When Leo takes good care of the bathroom, it stays safe and clean for everyone to use. He helps make sure it's a pleasant place. Taking care of shared spaces is a big part of being responsible.

The bathroom is a private place, and Leo respects that. He always gives others space when they are using a stall. He knows it is not kind to look under or over stalls, or to open or lock doors when someone else is inside.

After using the bathroom, Leo always washes his hands thoroughly. He turns on the water, uses plenty of soap, and scrubs his hands all over. Then he rinses away the suds, dries his hands with a paper towel, and throws the towel in the trash.

Clean hands help keep Leo and all his friends healthy and germ-free. He knows this simple step is super important. It's a small action that makes a big difference for everyone.

When Leo is all finished, he flushes the toilet and checks his space to make sure it's tidy. Then, he walks calmly and safely back to class, feeling proud of his good choices. Using the bathroom the right way shows he is growing and learning every day!
