

Alba's Journey to Chame: Learning Together

Alba Garcia Vidal

Hello! My name is Alba, and I am twenty-nine years old. I am tall with long, straight dark hair, brown eyes, and a turned-up nose. I grew up in a beautiful coastal city called Valencia, a sunny place famous for sweet oranges and delicious paella.

As a young girl, I loved singing loudly and playing volleyball with my schoolmates. I lived with my wonderful parents and my brother, Quique, close to the beautiful blue sea that always brings me calm. After a busy day of games, nothing made me happier than eating milk chocolate and crispy potatoes.

My mother is a schoolteacher, and she has always been my greatest role model. Watching her guide her students with patience and love filled my own heart with a big dream. When the time came to choose my path, I knew I wanted to follow in her footsteps and become a teacher too.

I have been a teacher for six years now, and it is a job that fills my heart completely. Every day in the classroom, I discover something truly magical. I realize that more than me teaching my students, it is my students who are teaching me how to look at the world.

I have always loved living new adventures and discovering different cultures and ways of life. This curiosity filled me with courage to pack my bags and travel far from home. My love for the sea and new experiences guided me on a grand journey across the ocean.

My exciting adventure brought me all the way to the beautiful town of Chame. Walking up to the local school, I saw the bright green trees and felt the warm, welcoming breeze. I knew in my heart that this wonderful place was exactly where I was meant to be.

Now, I am so happy to sit here in the classroom with all of you. I did not just come here to teach, but to listen, share, and learn from each of your unique spirits. Together, we are going to start a beautiful journey of friendship and learning.
