In the sunny land of Israel, lived King Solomon, known far and wide for his incredible wisdom. God had blessed him with a heart as vast as the seashore, and his clever proverbs and beautiful songs echoed across many nations. Everyone knew of his legendary understanding, which was truly a gift from above.

Far away, in the bustling kingdom of Sheba, Queen Makeda heard wondrous tales of King Solomon. These stories weren't just about riches, but about a king filled with divine wisdom and understanding. Her imagination sparked, and she wondered if such a marvel could truly exist.

Determined to see for herself, Queen Makeda decided she must journey to Jerusalem. She wanted to test this wise king with her own difficult questions and riddles. With a confident smile, she began to prepare for an adventure that would change her world.

A magnificent procession soon left Sheba, a train of cheerful camels laden with exotic spices, sparkling gold, and precious jewels. Queen Makeda arrived in Jerusalem with immense splendor, a sight never before seen in the city. The air hummed with excitement as her grand caravan entered the city gates.

Queen Makeda was led to King Solomon, where she sat before him, ready to unveil her deepest thoughts. She presented him with challenging riddles and complex questions about life, kingdoms, and justice. Her eyes sparkled with anticipation, eager to see if his wisdom matched the tales.

King Solomon listened patiently, then answered every single question with astonishing clarity. There was nothing hidden from him; his words flowed with divine discernment, illuminating even the most intricate mysteries. Queen Makeda watched, her initial skepticism slowly turning into pure amazement.

But it wasn't just his words that captivated the Queen. She looked around Solomon's kingdom, beholding his magnificent palace, the orderly feasting at his table, and the respectful service of his attendants. Everything spoke of his wisdom put into practice, a testament to his divine guidance.

Finally, she witnessed King Solomon's reverent ascent to the House of the Lord, where he offered sacrifices. Seeing the perfect order, vast prosperity, and deep reverence of his court, Queen Makeda was utterly breathless. Her spirit was completely overwhelmed with wonder and awe.

With a joyful heart, Queen Makeda declared, 'The reports I heard were true, yet they did not tell half of it! Your wisdom and prosperity far exceed anything I could have imagined.' She then offered King Solomon a hundred and twenty talents of gold, rare spices, and precious stones, a gift of unmatched generosity.

King Solomon, in his royal generosity, granted Queen Makeda all her desires and more. Filled with new understanding and the knowledge of God's favor, she departed for her own country. Her heart was full, forever changed by the incredible wisdom she had witnessed in Jerusalem.
