

The Little Dragon Who Couldn't Breathe Fire

Jaylin

High above the clouds, tucked between snowy mountains, lies the magical home of Ember Peak. Dragons of all shapes and sizes soar through the sky, breathing brilliant flames of blue, gold, and sparkling rainbow colors.

Among them is a sweet little orange dragon named Ember, who harbors a quiet secret. Unlike his vibrant, fiery companions, Ember cannot breathe a single spark of fire.

During morning lessons, Ember takes a deep breath and tries his hardest to puff out a flame. Instead of fire, a tiny, shimmering cloud of colorful glitter floats out of his nose, making the other dragons laugh.

As evening falls, a disheartened Ember sits alone on the edge of a high cliff overlooking the misty valley. He looks down sadly, whispering to himself that he will never be a real dragon.

A wise, gentle old dragon named Sage lands softly beside Ember, listening to his worries. Sage smiles kindly and reminds the little dragon that fire is not the only gift a dragon can possess.

The next morning, a violent storm sweeps through the peaks, trapping a nest of tiny, frightened baby birds on a treacherous ledge. The wind is too wild for the big dragons, and their hot fire would only endanger the birds.

Knowing he is small enough to brave the winds, Ember courageously flies into the howling storm toward the narrow cliff. He navigates the fierce gusts with determination, reaching the shivering baby birds.

Ember takes a deep breath and releases a beautiful, thick cloud of his magical sparkling glitter. The glowing glitter wraps around the panicked baby birds like a warm, soothing blanket, instantly calming their fears.

With the storm quieted by his gentle magic, Ember carefully carries the baby birds back to the safety of Ember Peak. The other dragons cheer wildly, realizing how special and brave Ember truly is as they apologize for doubting him.

Standing proudly on the mountain peak, Ember is celebrated as the legendary Guardian Dragon. He shines bright, proving to everyone that kindness and believing in yourself are the most powerful magic of all.