Bruno the Brave Bunny

Preshika Karki

Bruno the bunny was small and soft. He loved hopping around his cozy burrow.

One sunny morning, Bruno heard a loud noise in the forest. Boom!

Bruno felt scared. His heart went thump-thump. He wanted to hide under his blanket.

Bruno took a deep breath. "I can try," he whispered to himself.

He hopped one small step out of his burrow, then another, a little further into the woods.

He peeked behind a big tree and saw what made the noise.

It was only a branch that had fallen from a tall tree. It landed with a loud crash.

Bruno smiled. He was still a little scared, but he tried anyway.

Bruno felt proud and happy. He hopped all the way around the tree.

Being brave didn't mean Bruno wasn't scared. Being brave meant he tried. And Bruno learned that he could.