

Adventures on Earth 2.0

Kealyn Kenney

Once upon a time, there was a planet. It was called Earth 2.0 and it shimmered like a jewel in the vast darkness of space.

It is a lot like Earth, but it doesn't have gravity. Floating islands and drifting clouds create a magical landscape where nothing ever stays on the ground.

Aliens live on the planet. They are huge green aliens that look like slugs, have ears like Shrek, and move silently through the weightless air.

Humans have landed on their planet to get radioactive metal that they need for their technology. Their silver spaceship rests near a glowing canyon as the crew begins their mission.

The aliens use the metal to make guns. These powerful weapons emit a strange energy that can make people freeze instantly in their tracks.

The aliens see the humans at their spaceship. They watch from behind floating boulders, preparing to defend their home from the visitors.

The humans are frozen by the guns during a sudden encounter. The explorers are stuck in place like statues, unable to move or speak.

The humans are dragged to an inspection place. It's a big empty room with high walls where the aliens keep their captives for study.

The humans manage to escape by ambushing the aliens when they are not looking. They quickly grab the weapons and use the guns to freeze the aliens instead.

The smart humans get the metal and return back home in their spaceship. Their mission is finally complete as they leave the gravity-free world behind. THE END!
