

The Magic Pet Show

Ling Sui Chan

Mr. Magic, a cheerful clay magician with a tall hat and a friendly smile, stands on a vibrant stage next to a large, striped magic box. The textures of the hand-sculpted clay are visible, from his curly hair to the glossy finish of the stage. He gestures toward the mysterious box, inviting the audience to wonder what secrets are hidden inside.

In the front row of the audience, two clay children named Sam and Macy lean forward with wide, curious eyes. Sam wears a bright blue sweater and Macy wears a soft pink dress, both pointing at the giant box with excitement. They are eager to start the guessing game and see what magical surprises await them.

Mr. Magic taps the top of the box with his star-tipped wand, and a thick, yellow clay number one springs into the air. He explains that this creature cannot fly but is excellent at crawling slowly across the ground. Macy watches closely, trying to picture what kind of animal fits the description.

The lid of the box swings open to reveal a charming green turtle with a beautifully textured, hand-carved shell. The turtle blinks its large clay eyes as Macy cheers, having correctly guessed the first magical pet. It sits peacefully on the stage, looking perfectly sculpted and friendly.

With another flick of his wand, Mr. Magic makes a bright blue clay number two pop out of the box. He tells the children that these two pets can talk to people but they definitely cannot swim in the water. Sam and Macy exchange looks of wonder, trying to think of animals that can speak.

Two vibrant, multicolored clay parrots appear on a wooden perch, their feathers looking like individually layered pieces of clay. They tilt their heads and look ready to chatter, showing off their bright red, yellow, and blue wings. The children laugh as the parrots join the growing group of pets on the stage.

THE MAGICAL ESCAPE

A. ARTIST

Mr. Magic waves his wand again, and a small, round clay number one bounces out as a tiny hamster wheel begins to spin inside the box. He mentions that this pet is a fast runner but cannot sing a single note. Sam leans in close, watching the wheel turn with great anticipation.

MAGIC OF FRIENDSHIP

A fluffy-looking clay hamster with tiny pink ears and a twitching nose is revealed, sitting proudly next to its wheel. The clay has been textured to look soft and fuzzy, making the little creature look incredibly huggable. Sam grins, happy to meet the energetic new friend.

A splash of blue clay water hits the stage as a purple clay number four emerges from the magic box. Mr. Magic explains that these four pets cannot hop like bunnies, but they are the best swimmers in the world. The stage lights shimmer off the water, creating a magical atmosphere.

Four bright orange clay goldfish swim gracefully inside a clear clay bowl, their fins looking delicate and translucent. All the animals—the turtle, the parrots, the hamster, and the fish—gather around Sam and Macy for a final celebration. The children learn that every animal is special in its own way, whether they run, fly, or swim.
