

Toby's Great Coreville Fire Station Fiasco

Kathleen Lopez

Toby marches into the bright and busy Coreville Fire Station wearing a fire helmet that is much too big and keeps sliding down to cover his nose. Captain Grampus is trying to read a map while Firefighter Flo polishes a boot so bright it reflects Toby's excited face.

Toby decides to help wash the fire truck and pours a whole bottle of Mega-Bubble-Glaze into his water bucket. Instantly, the garage is flooded with shimmering bubbles, and Sir Woofington the Dalmatian is lifted off the ground, floating peacefully on a giant sudsy cloud.

The alarm bells ring for a Fluff-Emergency at the park, but the firefighters get stuck halfway down the fire pole in Toby's mountain of bubbles. They pop out at the bottom one by one, looking like giant, soapy marshmallows while Toby cheers them on.

At the park, a tiny kitten is trapped inside a house-sized ball of tangled rainbow yarn that is slowly rolling toward the duck pond. Toby tries to help by using the fire hose, but instead of water, it shoots out a stream of sparkling glitter-bubbles that coat the yarn ball.

The giant yarn ball begins rolling down Main Street, picking up the Mayor's hat and a tray of sprinkles from the bakery along the way. The firefighters are forced to chase it on tiny bicycles because the fire truck is still too slippery from Toby's mega-bubbles.

Back at the station, Toby wants to make Hero Energy Pancakes for the tired crew but accidentally uses Super-Rising-Whizz-Flour. The batter expands like a giant balloon, and fluffy golden pancakes begin to burst out of the station windows and doors like delicious UFOs.

The entire fire station is transformed into a giant pancake house with flapjacks hanging from the ceiling like tasty curtains. Firefighter Barnaby looks delighted as he wears a syrup-stained raincoat and tries to eat his way through the delicious obstacles to find the garage.

Another emergency call arrives because a parade of squirrels has taken over the library and won't leave the quiet zone. Toby suggests a Sticky Peace Offering, leading the squirrels out of the building in a long, orderly line following a trail of warm maple syrup.

As the sun sets over Coreville, the town is a colorful mess of bubbles, rainbow yarn, and the sweet scent of syrup. The firefighters sit on the back of their shiny truck, laughing and exhausted, while Toby tries to clean their boots with a stack of sticky napkins.

Captain Grampus presents Toby with a special Junior Chief badge made from a perfectly round, golden-brown pancake. Toby falls fast asleep in a soft pile of yarn, tucked in by his firefighter friends, while Sir Woofington snores with a stray donut on his tail.