

Lumie's Shy Shine

Guillermo Diaz Iparraguirre

Lumie, the sweet little Moon, loved to peek at the world below, but she was terribly shy. Her round, cheerful face, with rosy cheeks and wide, curious eyes, would often hide behind the softest, fluffiest cloud. A tiny smile played on her lips as she watched the sleepy world, always ready to dart away if anyone looked too closely.

Tonight, Lumie felt extra bashful. A playful gust of wind tickled her, making her giggle, but then she saw a little owl looking up, and poof! she pulled herself completely behind the biggest, coziest cloud. The night sky, usually bathed in her gentle glow, suddenly became much, much darker, surprising all the sleepy creatures.

High above, the twinkling stars began to notice. "Where's Lumie?" whispered a tiny star. Stardust Stella, the brightest and most adventurous star, with her sparkling crown and confident smile, zipped forward. Her eyes, usually full of mirth, now held a hint of worry as she realized Lumie was truly gone.

Stella called out to her star friends, their tiny, expressive faces gathering around her. Little Comet Carl, with his long, swishy tail, and wise old Nebula Nora, glowing softly, joined the worried huddle. They all agreed Lumie needed their help, and their determined expressions showed they were ready for an adventure.

The stars fanned out across the vast, inky canvas of the night sky, their vibrant colors streaking like tiny fireworks. They peered behind fluffy clouds and peeked around distant planets, calling Lumie's name in soft, musical whispers. "Lumie! Lumie, where are you?" their playful voices echoed through the quiet cosmos.

After searching high and low, Stardust Stella had a brilliant idea! She gathered all her star friends close, their glowing forms creating a beautiful cluster. "Lumie is shy," Stella explained, "so maybe we need to show her how much we love her by shining extra bright, together!"

With a collective gasp of excitement, the stars began to twinkle with all their might! Their bold, cheerful lights pulsed and danced, painting the dark sky with dazzling hues of yellow, blue, and pink. It was a magnificent, soft glow, like a warm, inviting blanket woven from pure starlight.

Hidden deep within her cloudy hideaway, Lumie felt a gentle warmth. She peeked out a tiny sliver, her one eye wide with wonder. The sky was no longer dark and scary; it was filled with the most beautiful, comforting light, radiating from her loving star friends. Her shy smile slowly returned.

"There she is!" cheered the stars, spotting Lumie's tiny peek. Their expressive faces beamed with joy, and they twinkled even harder, sending encouraging sparkles her way. Stardust Stella, with a warm, inviting smile, beckoned Lumie to come out fully, assuring her it was safe and wonderful.

Taking a deep breath, Lumie pushed the cloud aside and emerged, her full, round form glowing softly and confidently. She beamed a happy, shy smile at her star friends, who cheered with delight. The night sky was now perfectly lit, a testament to friendship, bravery, and the beautiful, shy shine of Lumie the Moon.
