Little Coral, a mermaid with a shimmering tail, woke up in her cozy coral bed. Sunlight dappled through the water, making her room glow. She stretched her arms, ready for a new day of ocean adventures. Today felt like a day for discovery.

Coral swam out of her home and greeted a friendly little fish with big eyes. The fish wiggled its tail, happy to see her. They exchanged happy bubbles, a special underwater hello, before Coral continued on her way.

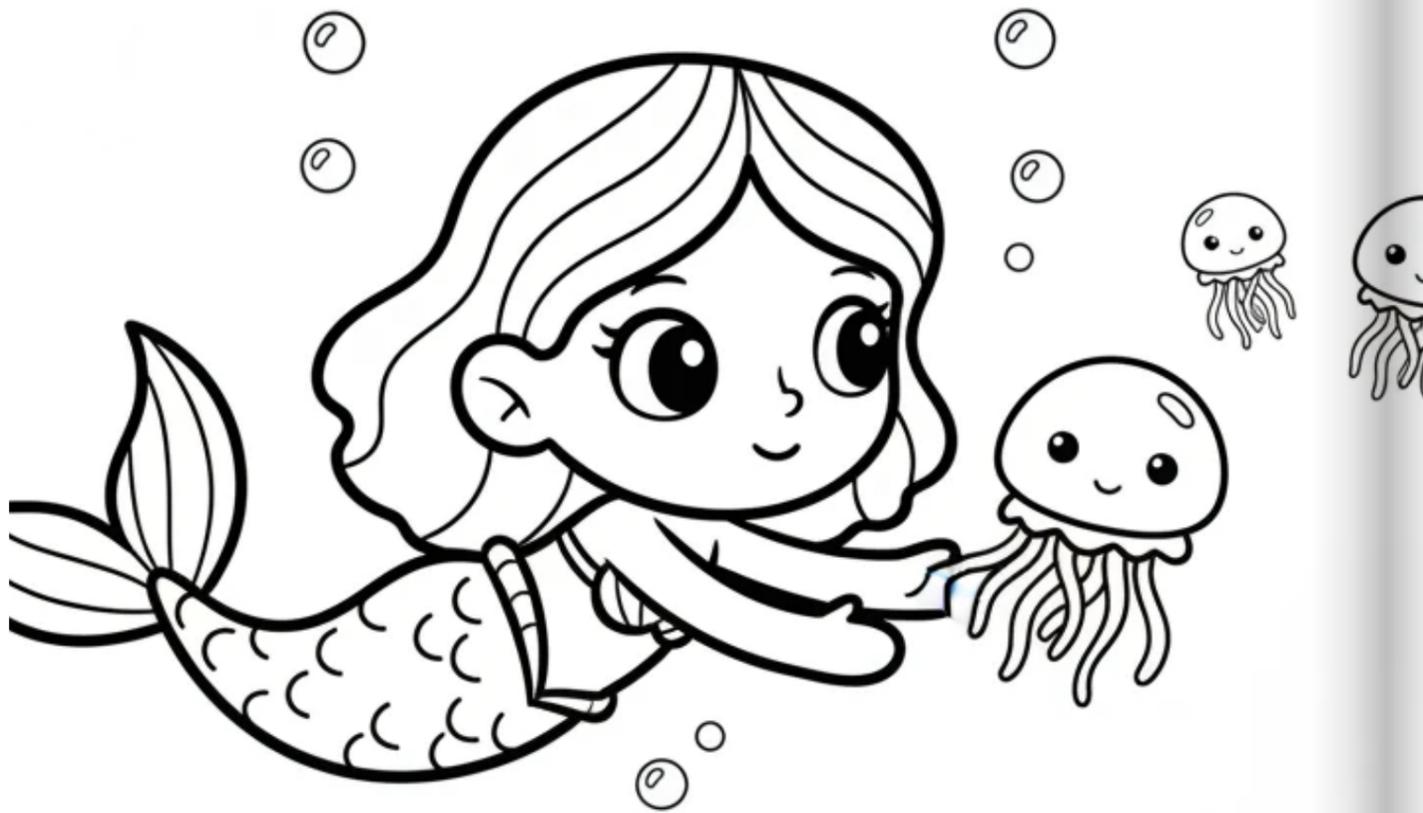

She glided past a magnificent coral reef, teeming with life. The corals formed giant, colorful castles and gardens for all the sea creatures. Coral loved to explore its secret tunnels and watch the tiny inhabitants.

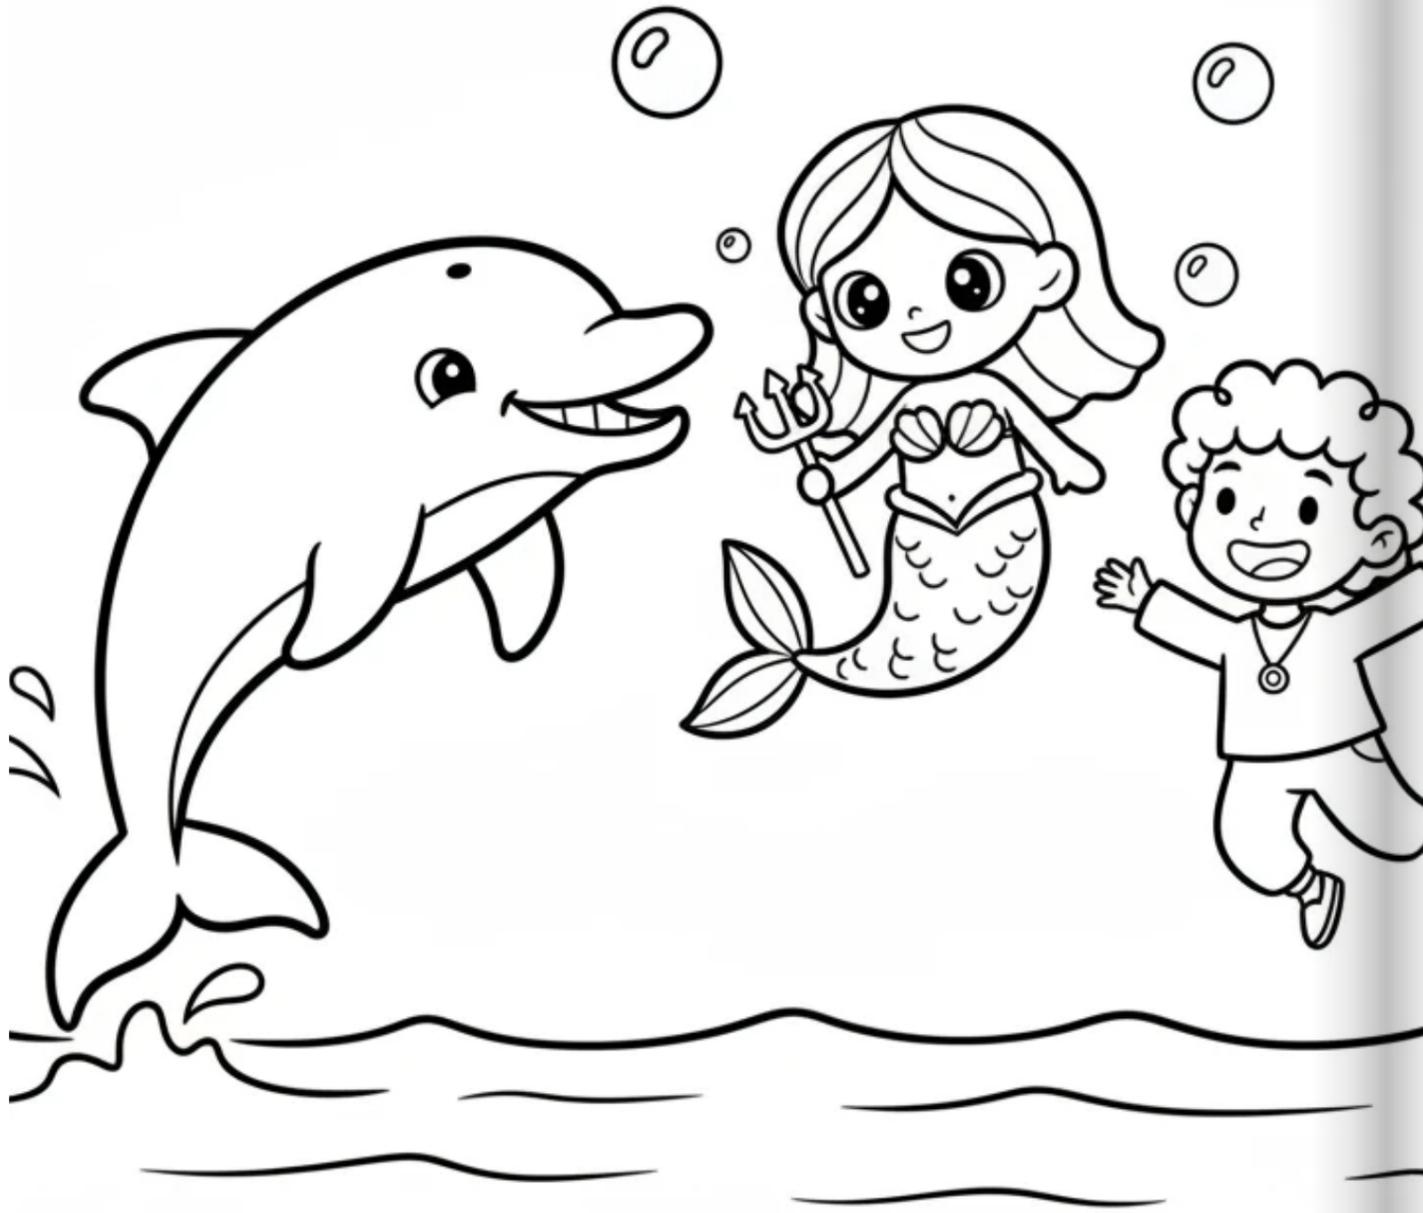

Further along, Coral spotted a tiny seahorse clinging to a piece of seaweed. It was perfectly still, almost invisible against its green home. Coral watched quietly, amazed by its clever camouflage.

Suddenly, she saw something wobbly and small floating all alone. It was a tiny, lost baby jellyfish, gently pulsing in the current. It looked very sad and confused, drifting far from its family.

Coral knew she had to help. She gently guided the baby jellyfish with her fin, looking for its family. They searched together, hoping to find the familiar shimmer of other jellyfish nearby.

As they searched, a playful dolphin swam by, smiling with its sleek nose. The dolphin gave a friendly click and swished its tail. It seemed to understand Coral's mission and offered to help.

But then, they saw something sad floating in the water: a plastic bottle and a tangled net. The ocean looked a little messy here. Coral knew this wasn't how the beautiful sea should be.

Coral and the kind dolphin worked together. The dolphin nudged the litter with its nose, and Coral carefully gathered the pieces. They carried it all to a special spot where it could be taken away.

With the ocean a little cleaner and the baby jellyfish safely home, Coral felt happy and tired. She swam back to her warm coral bed, dreaming of tomorrow's adventures and the friends she had made.
