

The Little Cloud Who Wanted to Help

Silviu Mercan

Pip was a little cloud with big feelings. He floated over the town and watched everyone hurry.

One day, Pip saw a girl sitting on a porch step. Her shoulders were droopy. Her eyes were watery.

"I wish I could help," Pip whispered. But clouds didn't have hands.

Suddenly, Pip had an idea! He wiggled his cloud body and puffed out his cheeks.

Pip squeezed and squeezed until... plink, plink, plink! Tiny raindrops began to fall.

The girl looked up, surprised. She giggled as the gentle rain tickled her nose.

Pip kept raining, just enough to water the flowers in the girl's garden. They had been wilting in the sun.

The girl smiled as she watched the flowers perk up. She felt a little better too.

Pip beamed. He might not have hands, but he could still bring a little joy.

From then on, Pip always looked for ways to help, sharing rain and sunshine wherever he went.