

Luna's Starry Journey to Sleep

Rosemarie Anol

Luna snuggled under her covers, clicking on her small, star-shaped night light. The little lamp began to glow softly, chasing away the shadows in her room.

As the night light shined, the projected stars didn't just sit on the walls. They began to drift, floating gently around her bed like a warm blanket.

Luna's bed suddenly felt extra soft, like she was floating high in the sky on a giant, fluffy cloud. All around her, constellations twirled and danced in the gentle night breeze.

A little creature, glowing with silvery dust and having long, soft ears, appeared by her side. This stardust rabbit smiled warmly and offered a paw, inviting Luna on a sleepy adventure.

Together, they soared through a vibrant galaxy, passing planets that looked like giant gumdrops. Swirling rivers of starlight flowed past them, humming a quiet lullaby.

They eventually landed softly on the surface of the crescent moon, which was actually made of fluffy, vanilla-scented meringue. Luna bounced gently, giggling at the sweet, marshmallow-like dust she kicked up.

From the moon, they watched shooting stars paint colorful streaks across the dark velvet sky. Each star made a tiny chime sound as it zipped by, sounding like gentle chimes.

Luna began to yawn, her eyes feeling heavy as the sweet music of the galaxy filled her ears. The stardust rabbit guided her back, flying smoothly towards the distant blue and green marble of Earth.

Luna found herself back in her cozy bedroom, her cloud bed settling down to become her familiar mattress. She nestled deep into her pillow, feeling safe and very sleepy.

The little stardust rabbit waved goodbye before transforming back into a twinkling point of light within the night light's glow. Luna closed her eyes, dreaming of her wonderful, starry journey, fast asleep.
