

GOOD HEARTS

GCI Kid's Story book

In a lush garden filled with blooming flowers and soft sunlight, young Abby looks up at her mother with curious eyes. She asks what it means to have a good heart, and her mother explains that it is being kind, brave, and loving. Abby smiles brightly, deciding right then that she wants a good heart too.

When Leon takes a tumble from his bicycle on the dusty path, Abby rushes over with a warm smile to help him up. She gently brushes the dirt off his clothes and asks if he is okay, showing that even a small act of kindness can turn a sad moment into a happy one.

At the classroom door, a new student named Lea stands shyly, clutching her bag and feeling unsure in her new surroundings. Joshua notices her and brightly invites her to come sit with them, making her feel instantly welcomed and safe among her new friends.

As the golden evening light fills the room, Samuel's mother tells him it is time for bed. Though he wants to keep playing with his colorful blocks, Samuel chooses to listen with love and trust, tucking his toys away and saying a sweet goodnight to them.

Elisha looks down at a broken toy, his heart heavy with a mistake he made by accident. He bravely goes to his mother and tells her the truth instead of hiding it, finding that honesty brings a proud hug and a much lighter heart.

After an accident where David hurts Jonathan's feelings during a game, David offers a sincere and heartfelt apology. Jonathan smiles and forgives him immediately, proving that letting go of hurt makes their friendship even stronger and more peaceful than before.

Little Noa stretches as high as he can on his tiptoes, but he is still too short to reach the light switch. With his father's encouraging words about how beautiful things take time, Noa waits and grows until the day he finally reaches the switch all by himself.

The classroom erupts in joy as Joshua's classmates surprise him with a colorful birthday cake and thoughtful gifts. Joshua overflows with gratitude, thanking everyone with a huge smile and happily sharing his cake so that everyone can enjoy the blessing together.

Every evening before the sun goes down, Abby takes great care to arrange her colorful shoes, favorite toys, and school bag in their proper places. She learns that being responsible for her own things is a wise way to help her family and care for her home.

Under the glowing orange sky of a beautiful sunset, all the children hold hands in a circle of friendship and unity. They promise to keep their hearts good and be a bright light of love, kindness, and peace for the whole world to see.
