

Ava and Arlo Find Their Forever Family

Elizabeth Wheeler

Deep in a peaceful woodland lived two little armadillos named Ava and Arlo, who shared everything and dreamed of having a family of their own.

One evening, Ava wondered aloud what it felt like to belong somewhere, hoping that she and Arlo would find their own family someday.

At the woodland children's home, wise Oliver the Owl shared wonderful news that a kind alligator couple wanted to meet them both.

Though excited to hear the news, the twins felt a flutter of nervous butterflies and wondered if they would know how to be good children.

The next morning, Oliver walked with Ava and Arlo along a winding garden path toward a charming cottage where their new lives awaited.

Mama and Papa Alligator greeted them warmly at the gate with gentle smiles, reassuring the twins that they could take all the time they needed.

Suddenly, an energetic orange fox named Felix and a sweet cream-colored bunny named Bella bounded over to welcome them to their new home.

At lunchtime, everyone gathered around a cozy kitchen table filled with warm soup, laughter, and stories, proving that families come in all wonderful shapes and sizes.

After lunch, Mama Alligator showed Ava her new bedroom, complete with a cozy bed and a special shelf for all her favorite things.

Surrounded by their new parents and siblings, Ava and Arlo finally realized they had found the place where they truly belonged.
