

The Four Seasons Adventure

Shana Patel

Lila stands by her window, looking out at the world with a curious smile. She loves how the earth changes its clothes throughout the year, bringing new surprises with every passing month.

When spring arrives, the garden wakes up from its long sleep. Lila watches bright tulips and daisies poke their heads through the soft green grass, painting the ground in vibrant colors.

High in the leafy branches of the oak tree, tiny baby birds begin to chirp for their breakfast. Lila listens to their sweet songs and watches the busy parents fly back and forth with food.

As the days grow longer, the golden summer sun warms the air. Lila feels the heat on her skin and sees the meadows shimmering under the bright blue sky.

Summer is the perfect time for adventures with friends. They spend their long afternoons running through the tall grass and playing games under the shade of big, leafy trees.

Soon, the air turns crisp and the leaves on the trees transform into a sea of red, orange, and yellow. Lila marvels at the beautiful colors that make the whole world look like a giant painting.

Large piles of crunchy leaves gather on the ground, waiting for someone to play. With a big leap, Lila jumps right into the middle, laughing as the dry leaves crackle and fly around her.

When winter comes, a soft blanket of white snow covers the hills and the houses. The world becomes very quiet and peaceful, as if the earth is taking a long, cozy nap.

Back inside her warm house, Lila wraps herself in her favorite fuzzy coat. She holds a mug of steaming hot cocoa and watches the snowflakes drift slowly past the window.

Lila smiles, feeling happy and content in her warm home. She realizes that every season has its own special magic, and she can't wait to see the flowers bloom all over again.
