

The Mystery of the Missing Berry Cake

Joseph Dodd

PIPPA AND THE FADING HARVEST

PIPA & BERRY: A SWEET REMEDY

Deep within the Orchard of Eternal Bloom, Pippa the Strawberry Sprite and her friends are busy decorating the Great Oak. They hang lanterns made of glowing dew-drops and weave garlands of jasmine for the surprise party.

A BERRY SWEET CELEBRATION

The centerpiece of the celebration is a magnificent three-tier cake made of whipped cloud-cream and wild forest berries. It sits atop a polished toadstool, smelling of sweet nectar and summer sunshine.

Suddenly, a mysterious gust of wind blows through the orchard, extinguishing the dew-drop lanterns and plunging the clearing into darkness. The fairies flutter their wings in confusion as a strange rustling sound echoes through the leaves.

When the glow-worms relight the area, a collective gasp fills the air. The toadstool is empty, and the beautiful Berry-Cream Cake has completely vanished, leaving behind only a few scattered crumbs and a sticky blue smudge.

Pippa notices a trail of iridescent blue juice leading away from the party and into the thick, tangled brambles. With a brave flutter of her wings, she rallies her friends to follow the sticky clues into the unknown woods.

The search party flies through the Whispering Vines, where the leaves murmur secrets of a heavy guest passing through. Pippa spots a giant, fuzzy yellow shape moving behind a cluster of oversized bluebells.

They discover Barnaby the Giant Bumblebee tucked away in a hollow log, looking very guilty with cream all over his fuzzy face. He is cradling the remains of the cake, looking more sad than mischievous.

Barnaby sniffles and explains that he smelled the sweetness and felt lonely watching the fairies prepare for their party. He didn't mean to steal it, but he just wanted to feel like he was part of the celebration.

Pippa smiles kindly and realizes that a party is better with more friends, even big, fuzzy ones. The fairies use their magic to gather fresh berries and whip up a new, even larger feast for everyone to share.

As the moon rises high, the fairies and Barnaby dance together under the glowing lanterns. The orchard is filled with laughter and the sweet taste of friendship, making it the best surprise party ever held.