

Love Knows No Colour

Bronwyn Simbarashe

Love Knows No Colour

Bright playground, children running with wide smiles, slides and swings are softly blurred in the background. The title “Love Knows No Colour” floats prominently in big, cheerful letters above a diverse group of kids happily playing together. The scene is full of vibrant colors and an inviting, celebratory mood.

Little Sunny, with her bright yellow dress and pigtails, peeks around a big oak tree, her eyes wide with wonder. She has just moved to a new neighborhood and sees the bustling playground for the first time. A tiny butterfly flutters past her nose, as if welcoming her.

Sunny steps closer to the playground, a little shy but curious. She observes different groups of children playing: some are building sandcastles, others are chasing each other, and a few are swinging high. She feels a tiny bit lonely, unsure where to begin.

Sunny tries to join a group playing tag, but they zoom past her without noticing. She spots a quiet boy, Leo, sitting alone by the sandbox, drawing patterns in the sand with a stick. He looks a little sad, just like she feels.

A brilliant idea sparks in Sunny's mind, making her eyes twinkle. She pulls a brand new, super bouncy rainbow ball from her backpack, its colors almost glowing. With a confident bounce, she sends it rolling towards Leo.

Leo looks up, surprised, as the rainbow ball gently bumps his foot. Sunny smiles warmly and invites him to play, her voice soft and friendly. Soon, they are giggling as they toss the colorful ball back and forth, their laughter echoing.

The sound of Sunny and Leo's joyful play catches the attention of other children. Curious faces turn towards them, then one by one, kids from different games and corners of the playground start to wander over. Their eyes sparkle with interest in the new game.

Soon, the entire playground is a whirlwind of fun! Children of all backgrounds, with different hair colors and skin tones, are playing together, chasing the rainbow ball and sharing their toys. Laughter fills the air as they form a big, happy circle of friends.

Sunny stands in the middle of the joyful chaos, a huge, radiant smile spreading across her face. She watches her new friends, all connected by their shared laughter and games. Her heart feels warm and full, knowing she helped bring everyone together.

All the children, hands joined, form a magnificent, diverse chain of friendship, looking directly at the reader. A brilliant, arching rainbow, even brighter than Sunny's ball, stretches across the clear blue sky above them. The message is clear: love and friendship shine brightest when shared by all.