Mu Ryan

Lily is in her sunny garden. She has a big smile and is playing with a bright red ball. The flowers around her are simple shapes, reaching for the sky.

Lily stops her game when she sees something small on the ground. It is a tiny bird, looking a little lost and sad. Its wing looks a bit droopy.

Gently, Lily reaches out a hand to the little bird. She is very careful not to scare it. The bird looks up at her with big, simple eyes.

Lily brings out a tiny crumb from her pocket.
She places it gently on the ground for the bird.
The bird pecks at it happily.

Soon, the bird feels better and hops onto Lily's shoulder. They walk slowly through the garden, looking at all the plants. Lily giggles softly.

Lily's friend, Tom, comes to play. He sees the bird and his eyes grow wide with wonder. Lily smiles and introduces her new friend.

Lily, Tom, and the little bird play a gentle game of hide-and-seek among the flowers. The bird chirps happily from a low branch. The children laugh.

A bigger bird, the little bird's parent, flies down to greet them. Lily and Tom wave goodbye as the little bird flies off with its family. They feel happy for their friend.

Back inside, Lily and Tom sit at a small table. They are drawing pictures of their bird friend with big, happy crayons. Their drawings are simple and colorful.

Lily and Tom look at each other and smile. They know they did a good thing. Their friendship feels even stronger, just like the little bird's flight.
