

Best Friends, Big Dreams

Takaria 14

Salsa and Angga are best friends who go to the same school. They are happy third-grade students who always sit next to each other with big smiles. Today, they are walking into their bright classroom, ready for a fun day of learning.

Salsa absolutely loves math and thinks numbers are like magic puzzles. Whenever Angga gets stuck on a tricky math problem, Salsa happily points to the chalkboard and explains it to him step by step.

Angga's favorite subject is English, and he loves reading exciting stories. When Salsa finds a difficult English word, Angga kindly shows her how to read it, making them a perfect learning team.

Salsa has a big dream to become a wonderful doctor one day. During recess, she gently wraps a bandage around a teddy bear's arm, practicing how to take care of people and keep them healthy.

Angga looks up at the blue sky and dreams of becoming a brave pilot. He zooms around the playground holding a toy airplane, imagining himself flying high above the fluffy white clouds.

After a busy morning of lessons, the two friends sit together for a delicious lunch. Salsa enjoys a big plate of savory fried rice, while Angga happily munches on his favorite crispy fried chicken.

For dessert, they love to share their favorite sweet fruits. Salsa takes a bite of a juicy yellow mango, and Angga scoops up a creamy green avocado, laughing and sharing their snacks.

Whenever the schoolwork gets a little difficult, Salsa and Angga give each other a high-five. They promise to keep studying hard and stay strong together, no matter what challenges come their way.

Back at home, Salsa studies her science books and Angga draws maps of the sky under the warm glow of their desk lamps. They are both working hard every single day to make their big dreams come true.

Walking home together under a beautiful sunset, Salsa and Angga look toward the future with bright, happy eyes. With a true friend by their side, they know they can achieve anything they imagine.
