Abby stands in her bright, colorful classroom as the warm morning sun streams through the window. She wears a gentle smile and a colorful dress, ready to start a day filled with kindness and love.

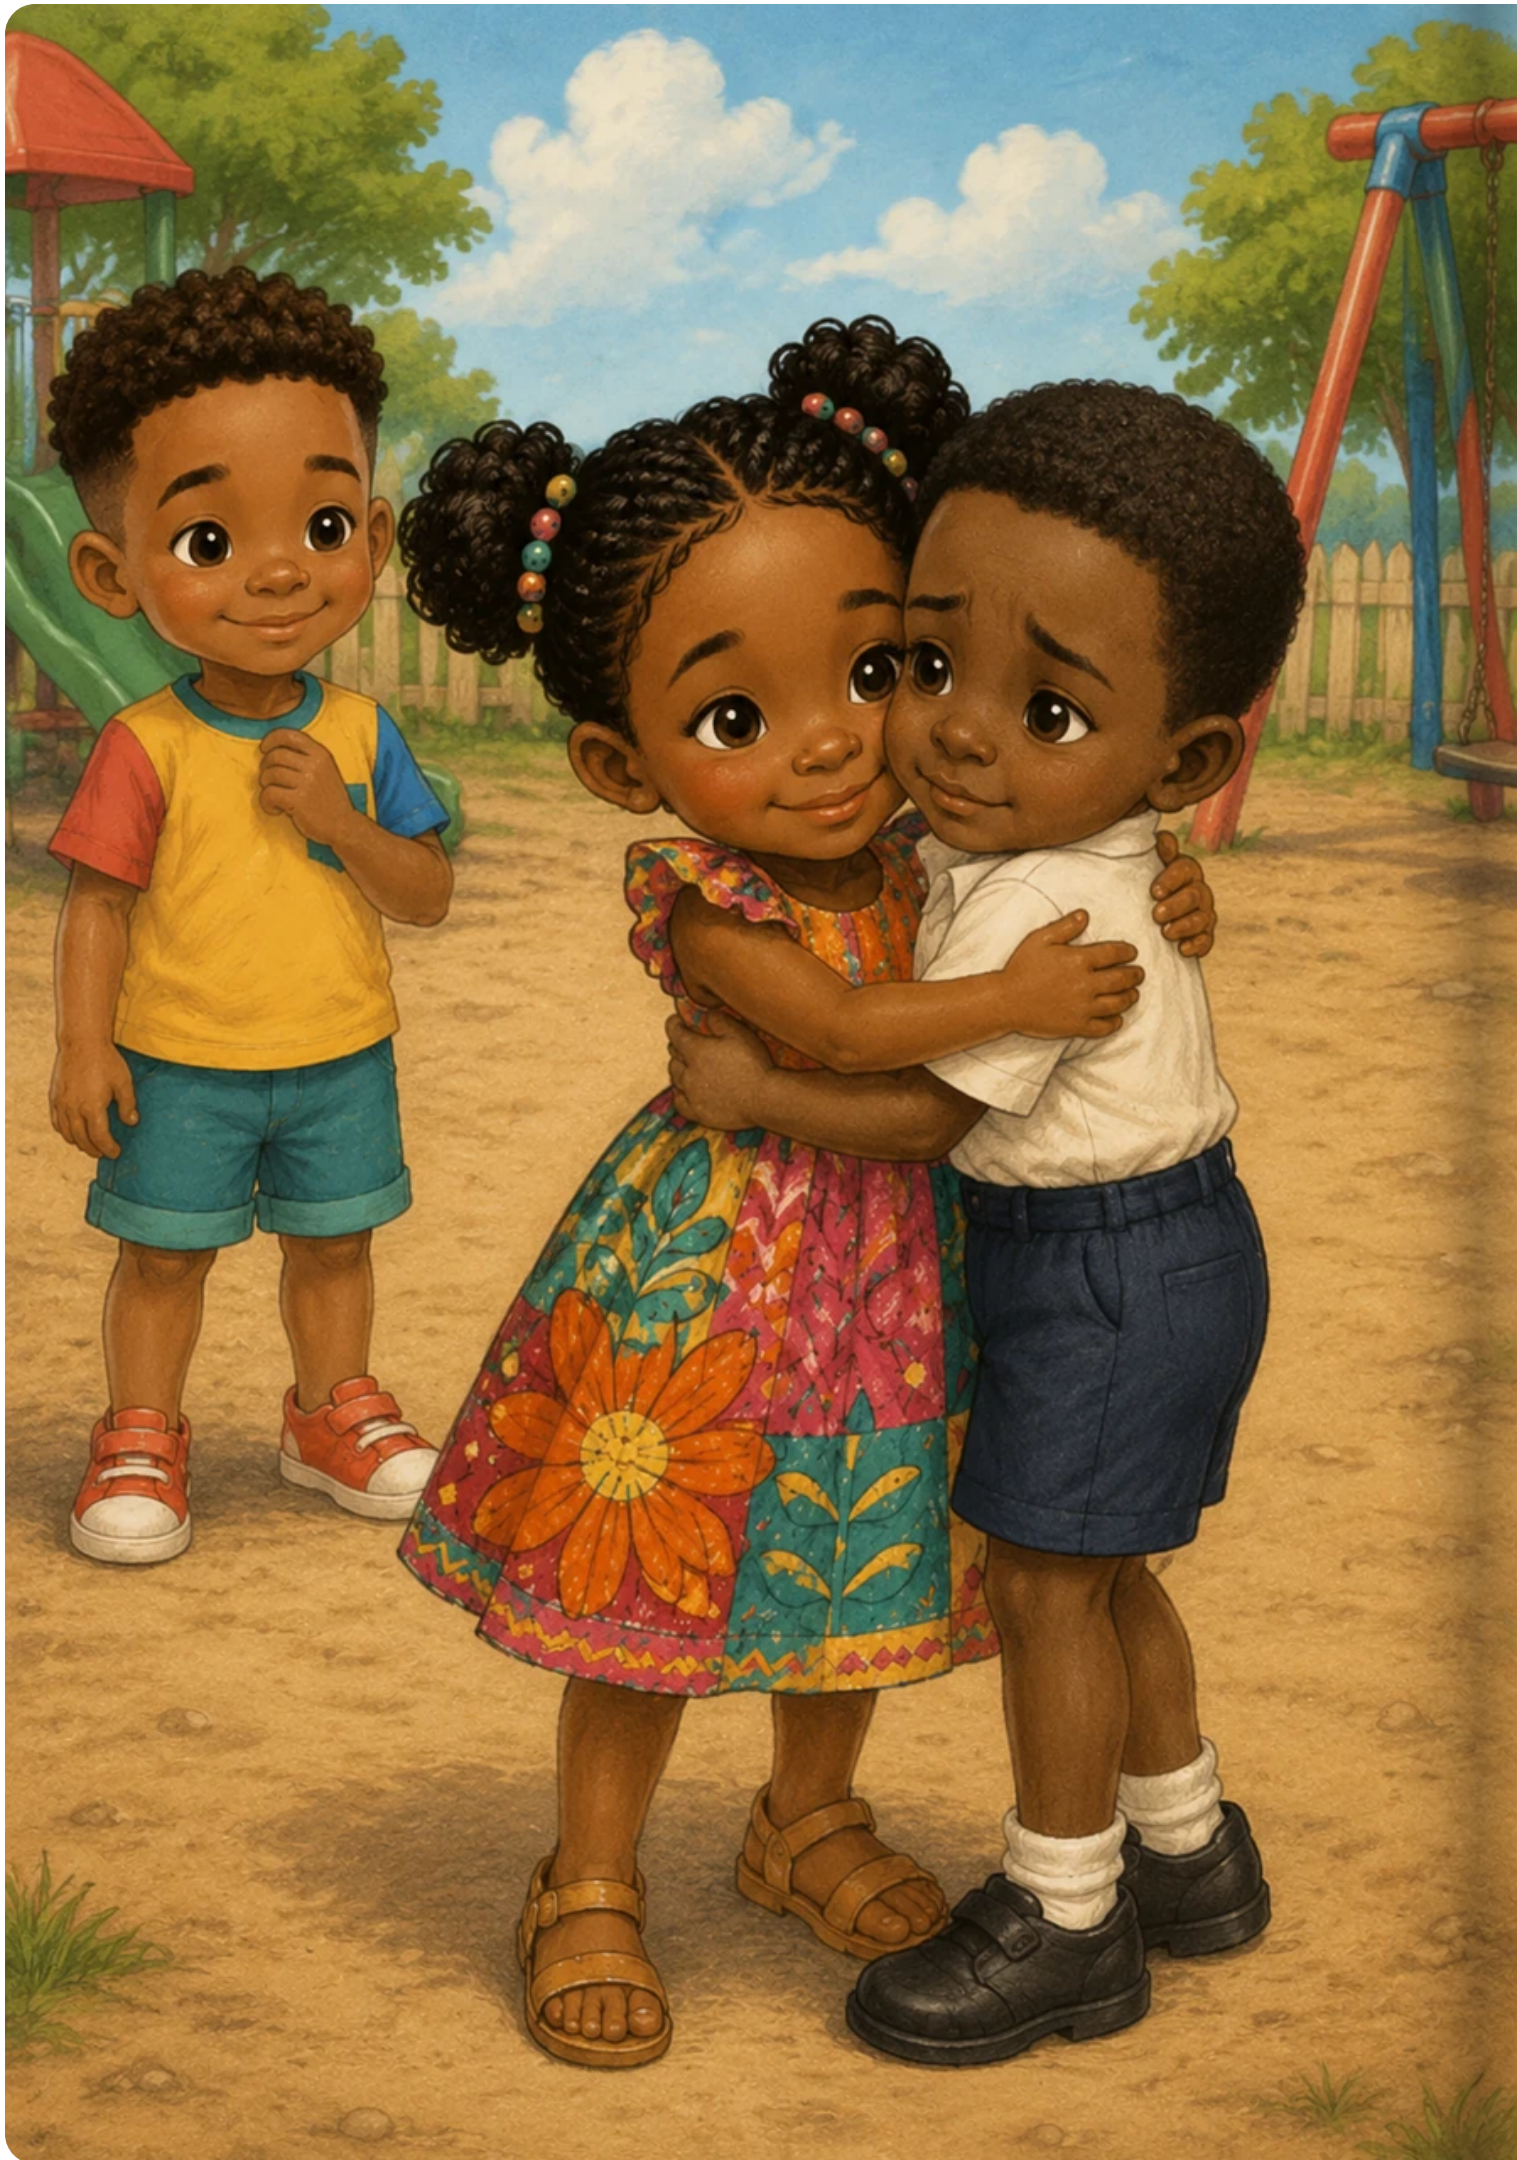

When a new boy named Leo arrives at school looking shy and nervous, Abby steps forward with a friendly wave. She offers him a seat at her table, making him feel welcome and safe in his new environment.

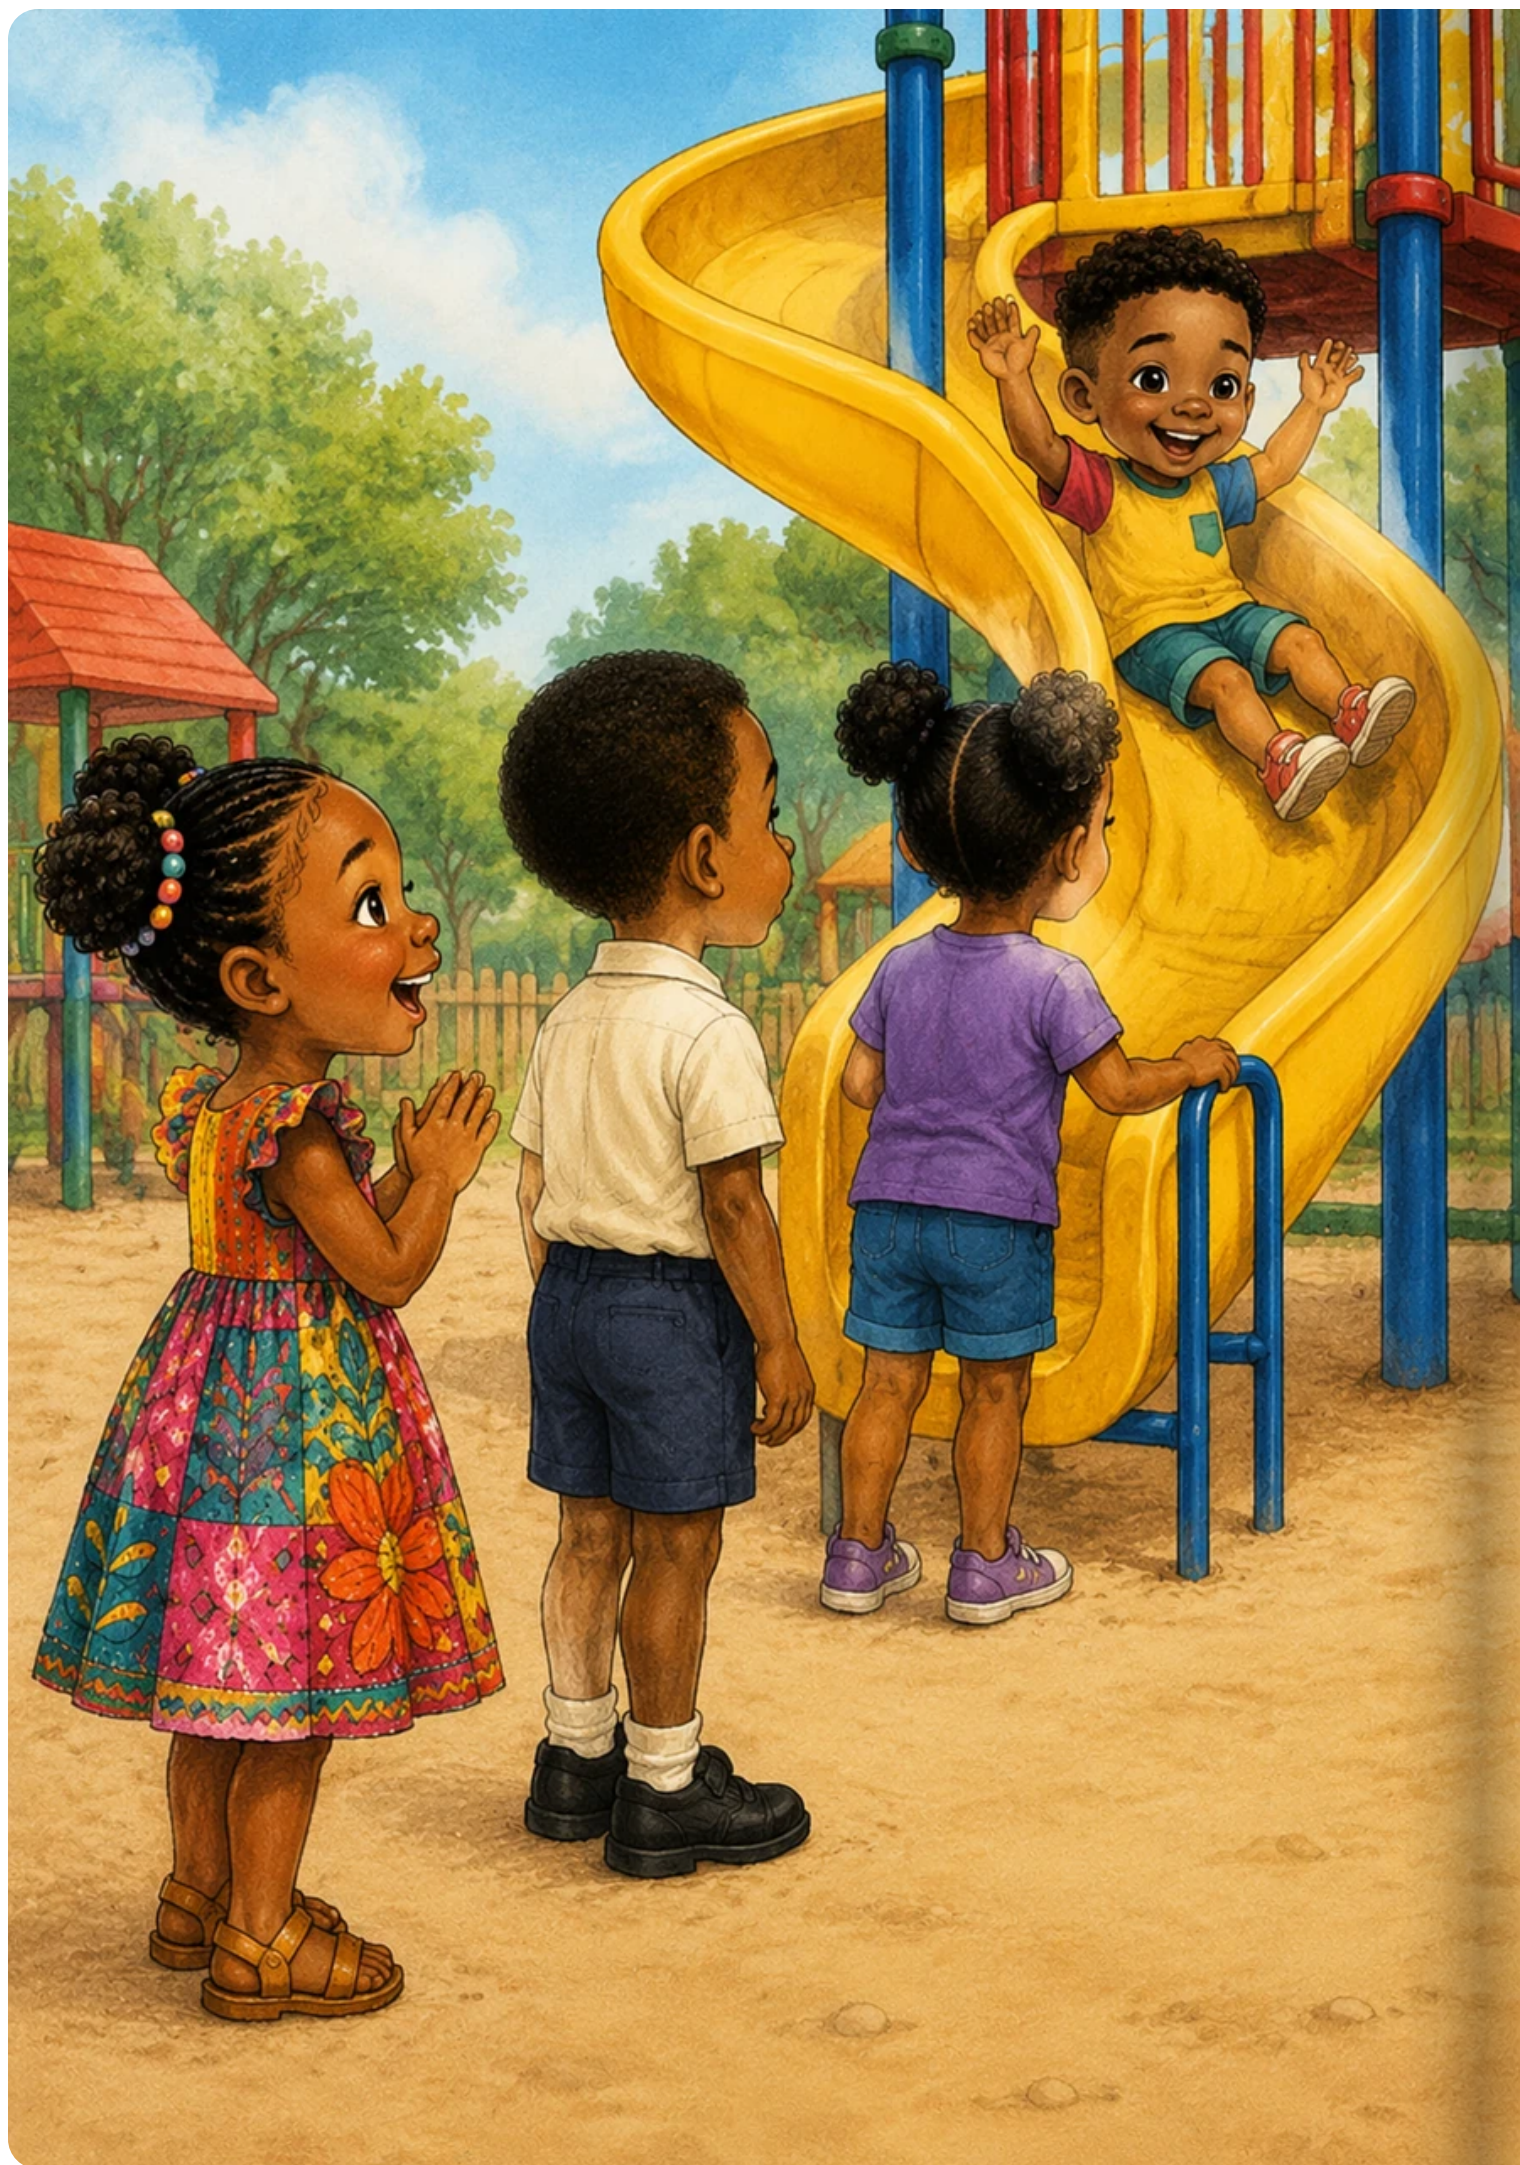

At home, Abby listens carefully when her mother asks her to wash her hands and help set the table for dinner. She obeys with a joyful heart, knowing that listening to her parents is a way to show her love.

After accidentally spilling a glass of juice, Abby goes straight to her father to tell him what happened instead of hiding it. Her honesty shines bright, and her father gives her a proud hug for being brave enough to tell the truth.

On the playground, her friend Kofi accidentally bumps into her while running, but Abby doesn't get angry or cry. She offers a warm hug and tells him she forgives him, turning a small accident into a moment of peaceful friendship.

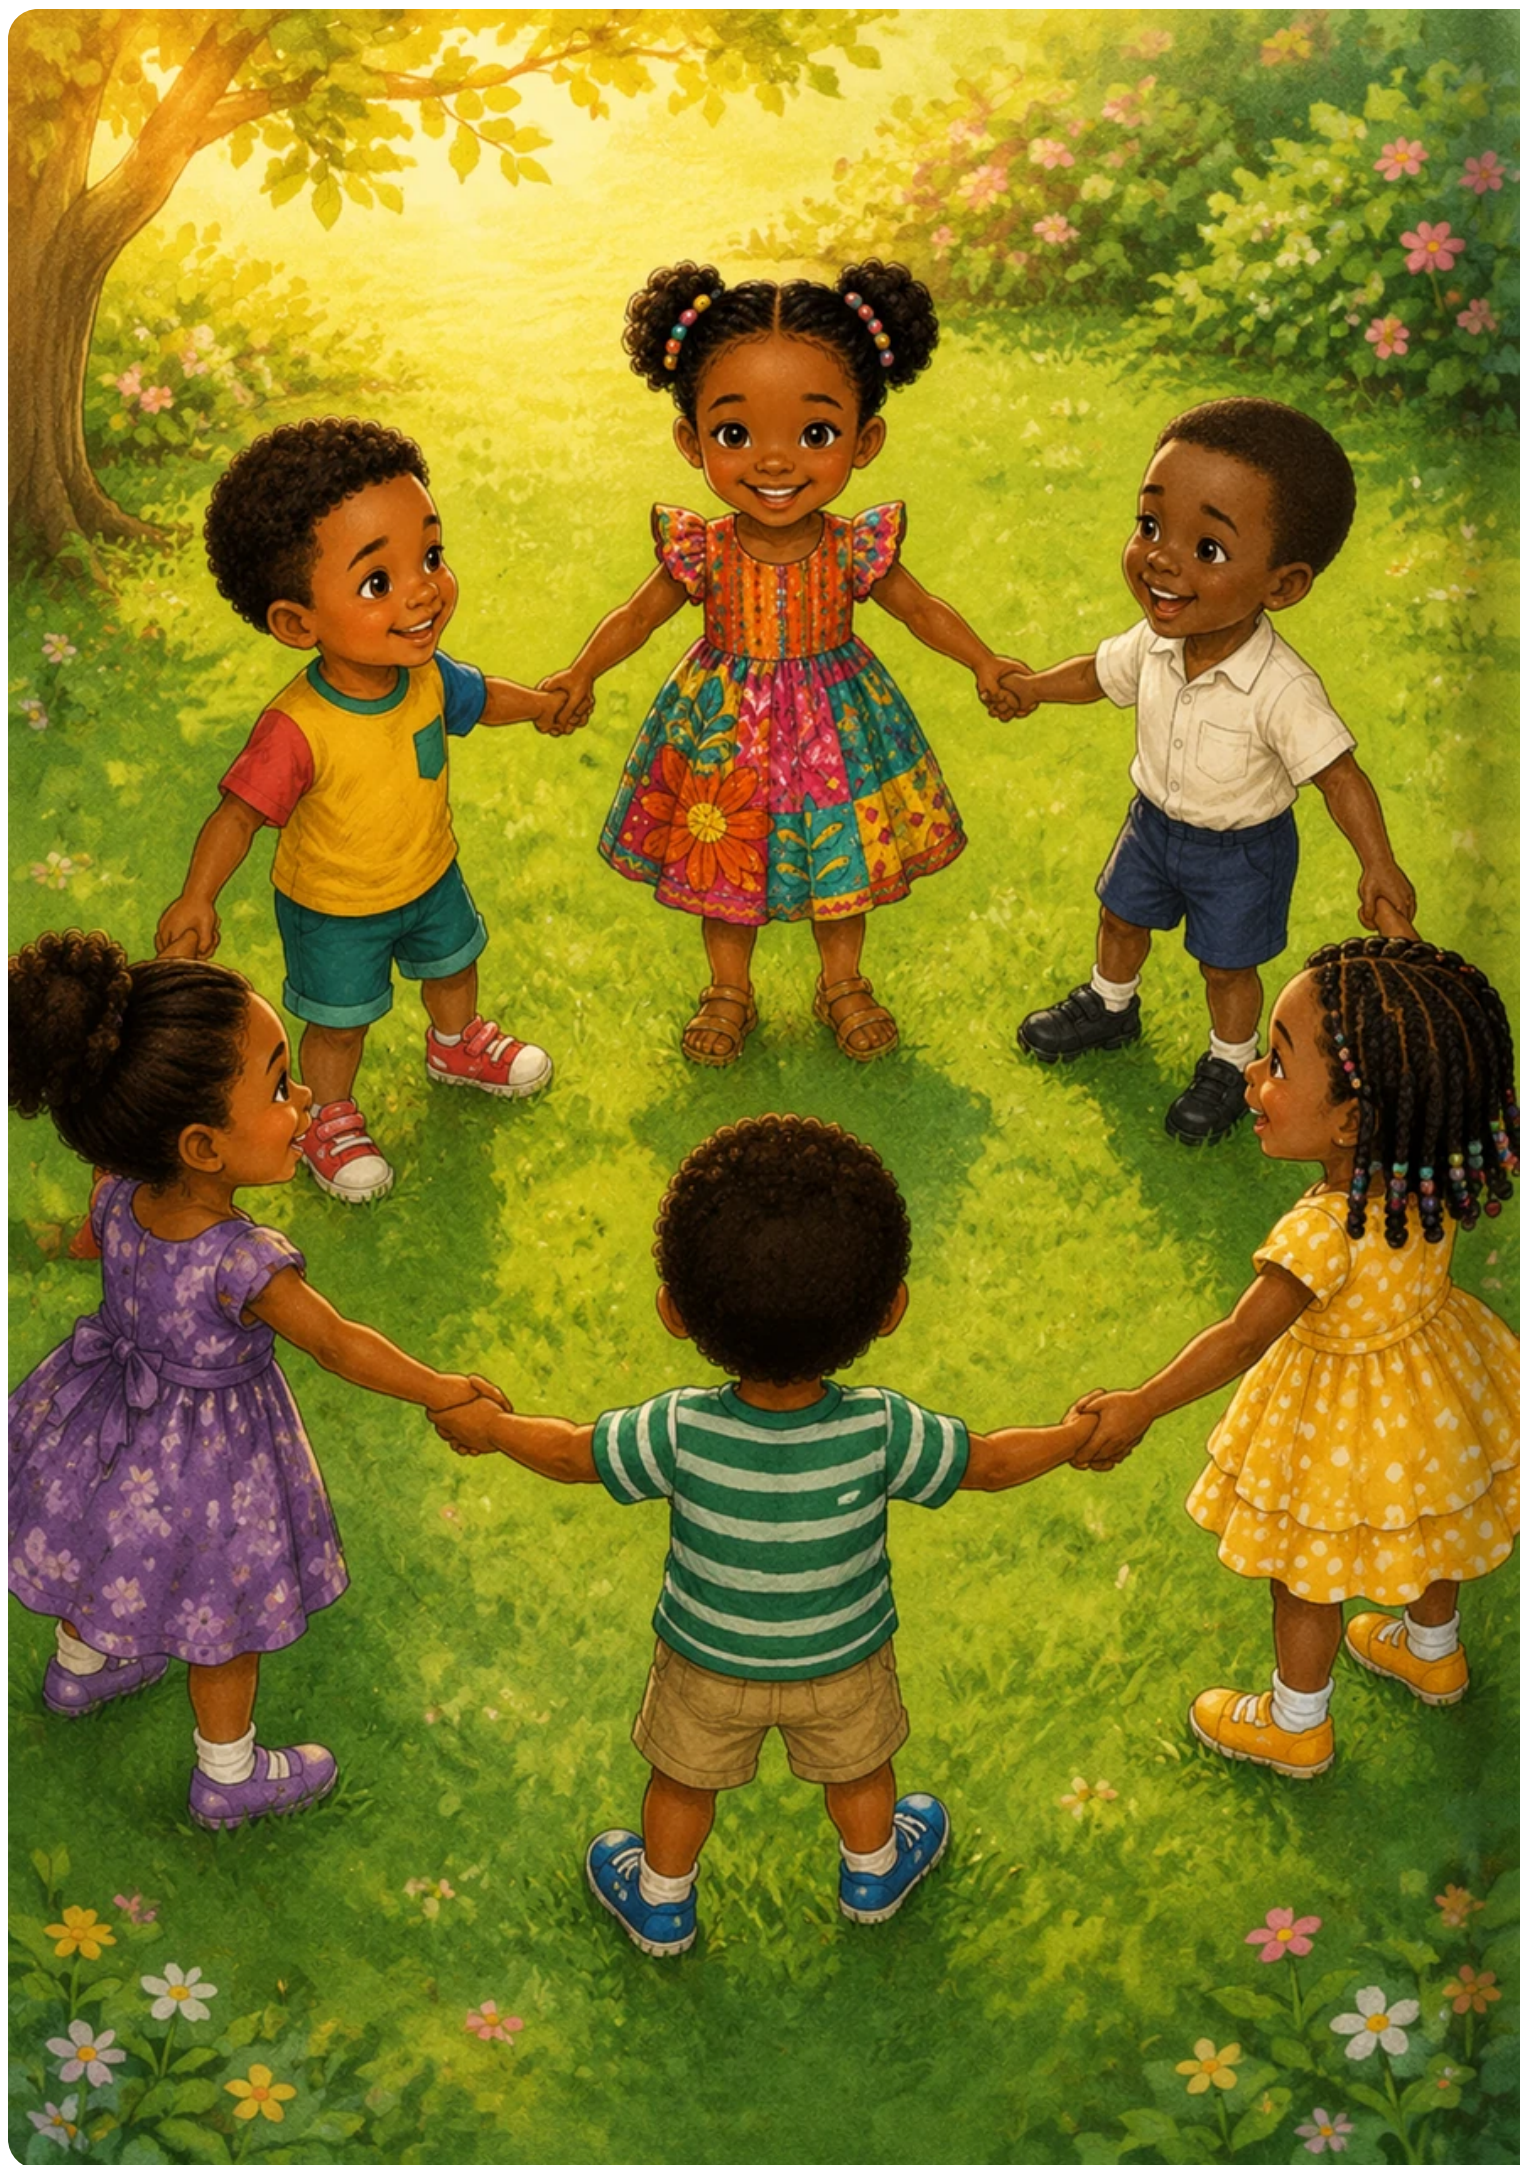

Abby stands patiently at the back of the line for the tall, curly slide, cheering for her friends as they take their turns. She knows that waiting with a happy heart makes the fun even better when it is finally her turn to slide down.

During snack time, Abby closes her eyes for a moment to feel thankful for the delicious fruit and the friends sharing it with her. Her heart is full of gratitude for the many small blessings she receives throughout the day.

When the school bell rings, Abby stays behind for a few minutes to help her teacher pick up the colorful building blocks. She takes responsibility for her classroom, making sure everything is neat and ready for the next morning.

Under the soft glow of the afternoon sun, Abby and all her friends hold hands in a big, happy circle on the grass. Their laughter fills the air as they celebrate the beautiful bond of friendship they have built by being kind to one another.

As the day ends and the stars begin to peek out, the children look up and promise to keep their hearts good and kind. They want to be little lights that shine brightly, making the whole world a warmer and better place for everyone.
