

Tom's Big Green School Bag

Melissa Ortegs

Tom stands in his bright, sunny bedroom with a big smile on his face. Today is a very special day because he is getting ready for school. He looks around at all the things he needs to pack for his big adventure.

Tom picks up a big blue book from his wooden desk. The book is heavy and filled with exciting stories and colorful pictures. He can't wait to show it to his teacher and share the stories with his new friends.

Beside the book lies a bright red notebook. Tom loves the color red because it is bold and happy. He imagines filling the blank pages with his very own drawings and the new letters he will learn to write.

Tom searches for something to write with and finds a small yellow pencil. It is short and pointy, making it the perfect size for his little hands to hold comfortably. He places it carefully next to his books.

Finally, Tom reaches for his favorite thing of all, a sturdy green school bag. It has soft straps and many pockets to hold all his treasures safely. He lays the bag open on his bed, ready to be filled with his supplies.

Tom slides the big blue book into the largest compartment of the green bag. Next, he tucks the red notebook right beside it. Everything fits perfectly inside the soft fabric, and Tom feels very proud of his packing.

He picks up the small yellow pencil and slides it into a tiny side pocket made just for pens. Tom checks the zippers to make sure everything is secure for the journey. He feels very organized and prepared for the day ahead.

With a big huff, Tom lifts the green school bag and slides his arms through the padded straps. The bag feels snug and comfortable against his back. He looks in the mirror and sees a brave student ready for anything.

Tom walks to the front door where his mother is waiting with a warm hug and a kiss. She tells him how proud she is of his big green bag and his brave spirit. He waves goodbye as he steps out into the golden morning sun.

Tom marches down the sidewalk, his green school bag bouncing gently with every happy step. He sees the school building ahead and knows that a wonderful day of learning and fun is about to begin.
