Pip was a little cloud, round and soft. He floated happily in the big blue sky, watching the world below. Pip loved to drift and see all the interesting things on the ground.

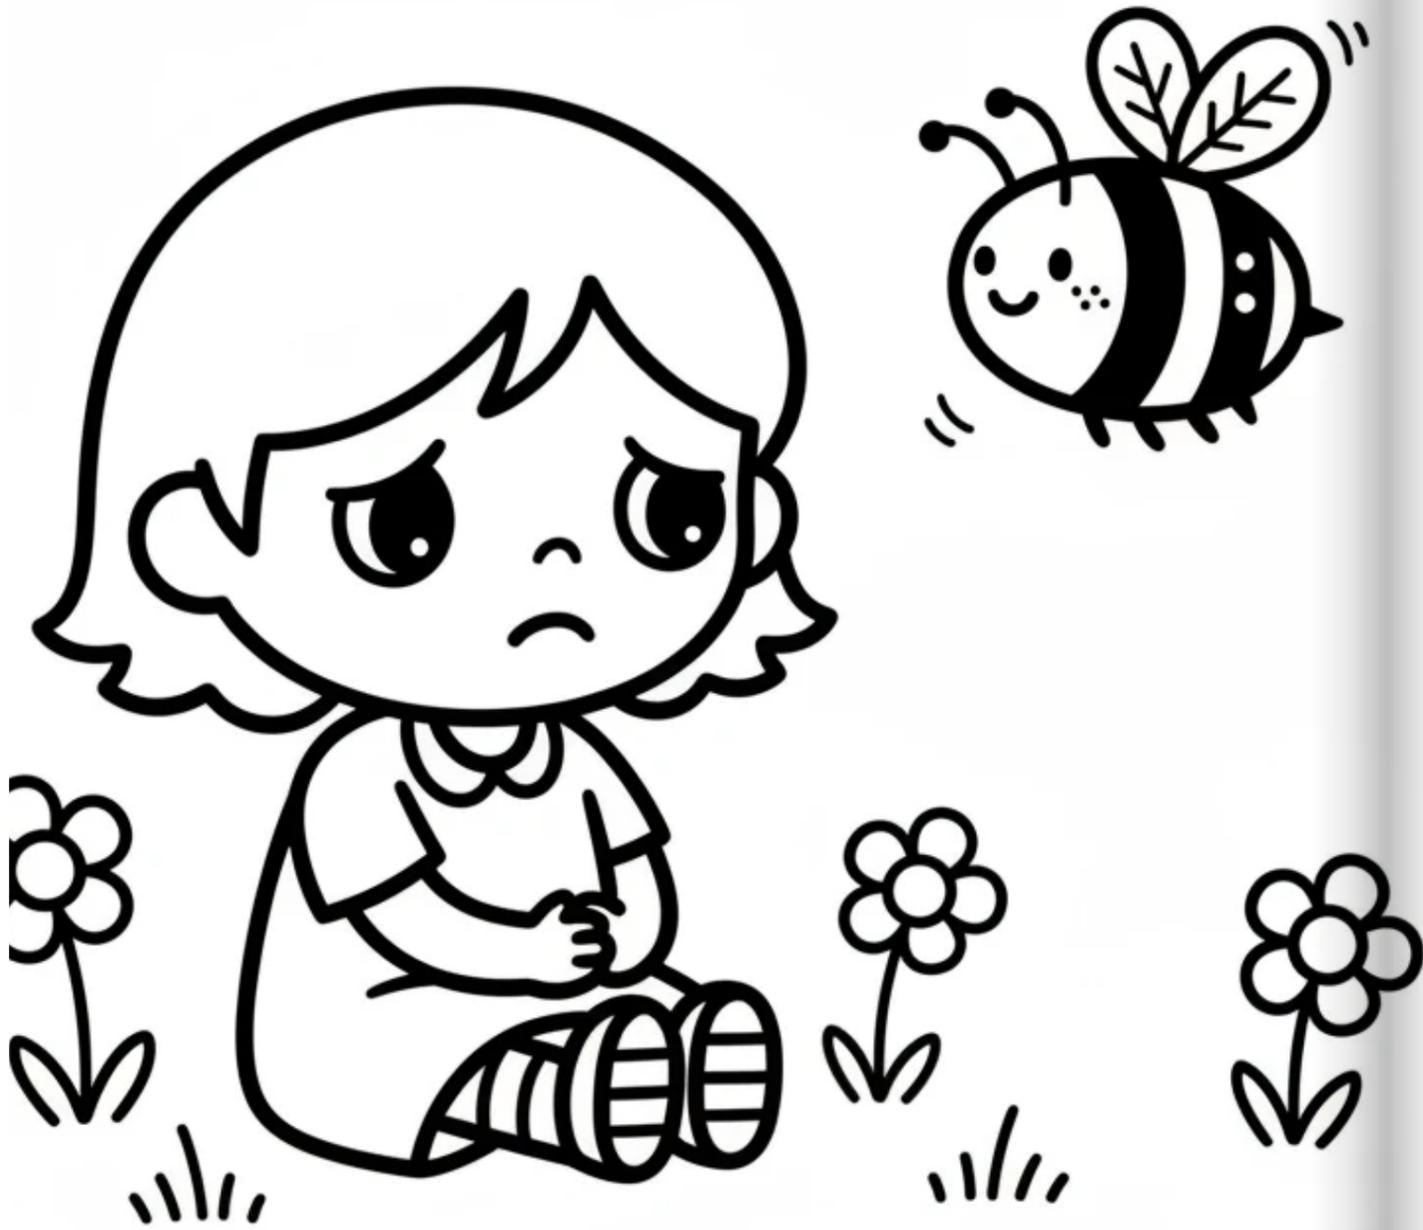

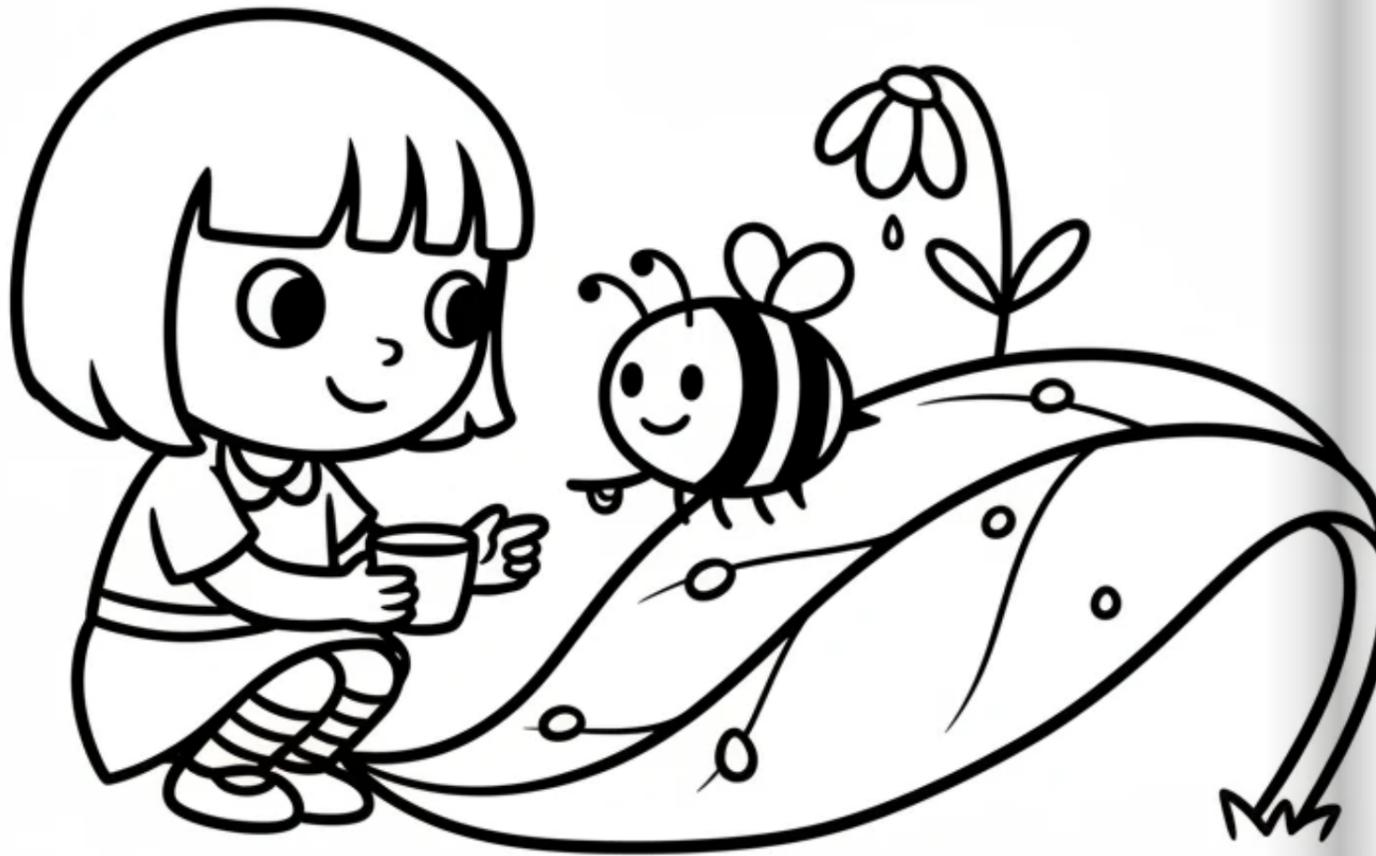

One sunny morning, Pip saw a small, sad flower. Its petals drooped, and its leaves looked very dry. The little flower was all alone, looking very thirsty under the bright sun.

Pip felt a little tug in his cloudy heart. He wanted to help the flower, but he didn't know how to give it water. He tried to puff, but no rain came out.

Suddenly, a tiny bee named Buzz buzzed by. Buzz had shiny wings and a happy stripey body. He saw Pip looking sad and floated closer to say hello.

Pip told Buzz about the thirsty flower. Buzz, being a very clever bee, knew just what to do! He showed Pip how to gently collect tiny drops of morning dew from big green leaves.

Together, Pip and Buzz carefully gathered the shimmering dew. Pip held the water in his soft cloud body, while Buzz guided him with a gentle buzz. They worked as a wonderful team.

They flew down to the sad little flower. Pip slowly dripped the dew onto its roots, drop by precious drop. Buzz watched with a smile, knowing they were doing good.

Slowly, magically, the flower began to perk up! Its petals lifted, and its leaves turned a brighter green. A tiny, happy bud started to unfurl.

The next day, the flower bloomed into the most beautiful, vibrant blossom! Pip and Buzz cheered with delight. Their kindness had made the world a little more colorful.

From that day on, Pip and Buzz were the best of friends. They often visited the blooming flower, sharing stories and laughter. Pip learned that even small clouds can make a big difference.
