

The Shape Picnic Adventure

Sitti Rahsa B. Ambahang

Under the bright, shimmering sun of Bikini Bottom, SpongeBob, Patrick, Mr. Krabs, and SpongeBob's mom, Margaret, spread a checkered blanket on the soft sand. They placed a large, overflowing picnic basket right in the center, surrounded by colorful coral and sea flowers.

Just as the hungry group reached for the food, Margaret held up a hand and smiled warmly at everyone. She proposed a wonderful new game called the Shape Picnic Game, where each person could only eat treats that matched their own unique shape.

SpongeBob's eyes lit up with excitement as he stepped forward to take the first turn. He reached deep into the basket and pulled out a perfectly square sandwich that looked exactly like him.

With a proud grin, SpongeBob took a big bite of his square snack, cheering about how much it matched his shape. The sandwich was delicious, and he felt very happy to have found something made just for a square like him.

Next, it was Patrick's turn to peek inside the basket to see what treasures were hidden within. His eyes widened when he discovered a pile of golden, star-shaped nuggets that sparkled under the water.

Patrick happily munched on his star-shaped treats, making loud crunching sounds that made everyone laugh. He declared them the tastiest nuggets in the whole ocean because they were shaped exactly like a star.

Mr. Krabs stepped up next, his claws clicking with anticipation as he searched the basket. He pulled out a large, vibrant slice of watermelon cut into a perfect triangle, matching his pointy top.

Mr. Krabs took a giant, juicy bite of the triangle watermelon, juice dripping down with every crunch. He gave a big, toothy grin, satisfied that he had found a snack that was just right for a triangle-shaped crab.

Finally, Margaret reached into the basket and pulled out a beautiful, round donut covered in sweet pink frosting. She smiled at the circular treat, noting how perfectly it matched her own round and friendly shape.

After everyone had finished their special snacks, the friends sat together on the blanket, feeling full and very happy. They realized that even though they were all different shapes, they could all enjoy a wonderful afternoon together.
