

Leo's Big Supermarket Adventure

Trisha Rai

Leo sits at the kitchen table with his mom, carefully drawing a picture of a giant red apple on their shopping list. The morning sun shines through the window as they prepare for their big trip to the store.

They arrive at the supermarket, where the automatic glass doors slide open with a friendly whoosh. Leo grabs the handle of a shiny red shopping cart, ready to lead the way into the world of groceries.

The produce section is a rainbow of colors, filled with mountains of oranges and stacks of leafy greens. Leo sniffs the air, smelling the sweet scent of ripe strawberries and fresh herbs.

Mom helps Leo reach for the biggest, crunchiest green apples and places them gently into a bag. They count the yellow bananas together, making sure they have enough for a whole week of snacks.

As they wander down the bread aisle, the delicious smell of toasted grains and soft rolls fills their noses. Leo points to a loaf of whole-wheat bread that looks just right for making his favorite sandwiches.

In the dairy aisle, the air feels chilly and crisp against Leo's cheeks. He carefully picks out a carton of cold milk and a tub of creamy yogurt, placing them neatly in the cart.

Leo spots a colorful display of fruit snacks and looks up at his mom with a hopeful smile. She nods with a wink, and he happily adds one special box to their growing collection of treats.

At the checkout counter, Leo helps lift the groceries onto the moving black belt. He watches with fascination as each item slides toward the cashier, waiting for its turn to be scanned.

The cashier smiles as the scanner makes a cheerful beep for every item. Leo helps pack the groceries into their sturdy reusable bags, making sure the eggs are placed safely on top.

Walking back to the car, Leo feels like a grown-up helper with a successful mission accomplished. He looks forward to going home and helping his mom put everything away in the kitchen.