The Cure for the World

Karannaphat (Aob) Jitmat

It is the year 2030, and the world is very quiet. Most people are zombies now, and the streets are empty. Only a few people are still human and safe.

John, Jack, Sugar, and Lilly are four best friends who live together. They stay in a small house with strong walls and a big gate. They are the heroes who want to save everyone.

One morning, Lilly finds a very old book in a dusty room. The book tells a secret about a special medicine. This medicine can make zombies turn back into happy people.

The four friends pack their bags with food and water. They look at a map of the big city to find the science lab. They are brave and ready for their long journey.

They walk through the broken city and see many old cars. The sun is hot, but they do not stop walking. They hold hands to stay together and feel safe.

Suddenly, a group of zombies appears in the middle of the road. Jack uses a loud whistle to make a noise far away. The zombies walk toward the noise, and the friends run past them.

They reach a tall white building with many windows. This is the secret science lab where the medicine is hidden. John and Jack push the heavy doors open to go inside.

Inside the lab, they find a beautiful garden with a blue flower. Sugar is very smart and knows how to use the flower. She mixes it to create a glowing green medicine.

They see a lonely zombie standing near the door of the lab. John carefully gives the green medicine to the zombie. Everyone watches and waits to see what happens.

The zombie's skin turns soft, and its eyes look kind again. The zombie is now a human man who smiles and says thank you. The four friends are happy because they can finally save the world.
