

Leo's Rooftop Kingdom

Ethan Strohm

Leo, a blond boy with thick glasses and a blue Nike shirt, carefully climbs the ladder to his favorite secret spot on the roof. The city below is just starting to glow with golden light as the sun begins its slow descent.

He sits comfortably on the edge of the warm shingles, swinging his legs while looking out over the quiet neighborhood. His glasses reflect the vibrant orange and pink hues of the evening sky like two tiny sunsets.

Leo pulls a worn sketchbook and a pencil from his backpack, ready to capture the magic of the view from above. High above the noisy streets, he feels like the king of his own peaceful and private kingdom.

A gentle evening breeze ruffles his blond hair as he watches a flock of birds fly past in a perfect V-shape. He follows them with his eyes, wondering what the world looks like from even higher up in the clouds.

The first few stars begin to twinkle in the darkening sky, making the distant city lights look like a sea of fallen diamonds. Leo adjusts his glasses to get a clearer view of the constellations starting to appear overhead.

He notices his neighbor's fluffy ginger cat perched on a nearby chimney, watching him with curious green eyes. Leo smiles and gives a small wave, feeling a quiet sense of companionship in the cool twilight air.

As the moon rises, Leo starts drawing a futuristic city where all the roofs are connected by glowing bridges of light. His Nike shirt reflects the silvery moonlight as his pencil moves quickly across the paper.

He hears his mother's voice calling his name from the window below, signaling that it is finally time for dinner. Leo takes one last deep breath of the fresh night air, savoring the stillness of his high-up sanctuary.

He carefully packs his sketchbook and pencils back into his bag, making sure his new drawings are tucked away safely. The roof has given him all the inspiration he needed to fuel his dreams for the rest of the night.

Leo climbs back down the ladder with a bright, satisfied smile on his face and a head full of new ideas. He knows that his rooftop kingdom will always be waiting for him whenever he needs to see the world differently.