

The Kind Pigeon and the Helpful Ant

Nakaj

Pip, a kind pigeon, watched from above. Antonia, a hardworking ant, busily searched for food.

Antonia was collecting crumbs near the winding river. She focused intently on her important task.

Suddenly, Antonia slipped on a wet stone.
With a tiny splash, she fell into the river.

The swift current pulled Antonia downstream. She struggled, calling for help with all her might.

Pip heard her faint cries from his tree branch. He quickly spotted the tiny ant in trouble.

Pip swiftly plucked a large, strong leaf. He gently dropped it right beside Antonia.

Antonia bravely climbed onto the floating leaf. It carried her safely to the riverbank.

Later, Pip rested peacefully on a branch. A sly hunter aimed his net at the pigeon.

Antonia saw the hunter's sneaky plan. Remembering Pip's kindness, she bit the hunter's foot.

The hunter yelled in surprise and pain, dropping his net. Pip flew to safety, saved by his tiny friend. One good turn deserves another.
