

Dash's Big Voice

Jodi Palmer

DINO ADVENTURES

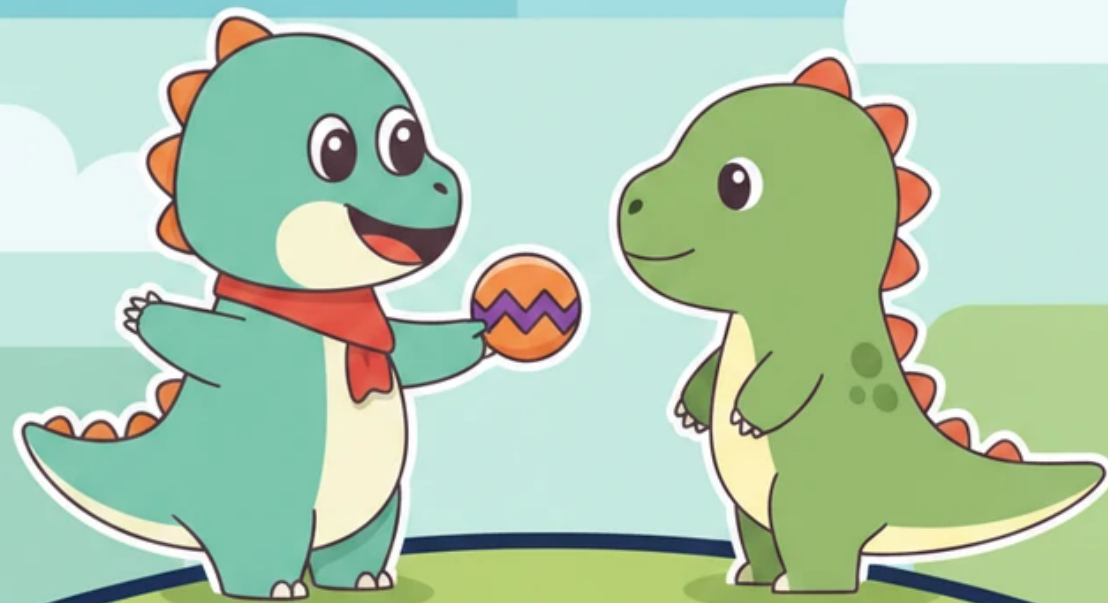

Dash the dinosaur walks to school with a big smile on his face. He wears a colorful strap that holds his AAC device close to his chest, ready for a day of learning and fun.

On the playground, Dash sees his friends Toby and Pip playing with a big pile of bright blocks. He stands nearby, watching them build a tall tower and wishing he could join the game.

A NEW FRIEND

Dash reaches for his AAC device and presses a clear button. The device speaks for him, saying 'Play with me,' as he looks at his friends with bright, hopeful eyes.

Toby and Pip look up and give Dash a giant dinosaur grin. My friends listened, and they moved over to make a special spot just for me in the circle.

As they build the tower higher and higher, Dash lets out a happy, chirping squeak. I used my sounds to show my friends how excited I was to see the tower grow.

TEAMWORK TOWER

Dash points to a blue block and then points to the very top of the tower. I used my voice to share my big idea, and my friends followed my lead to finish the masterpiece.

Sometimes Dash notices that he communicates differently than the other dinosaurs, but he knows that is okay. He feels proud of his device and the special sounds he makes.

YOU'RE IT!

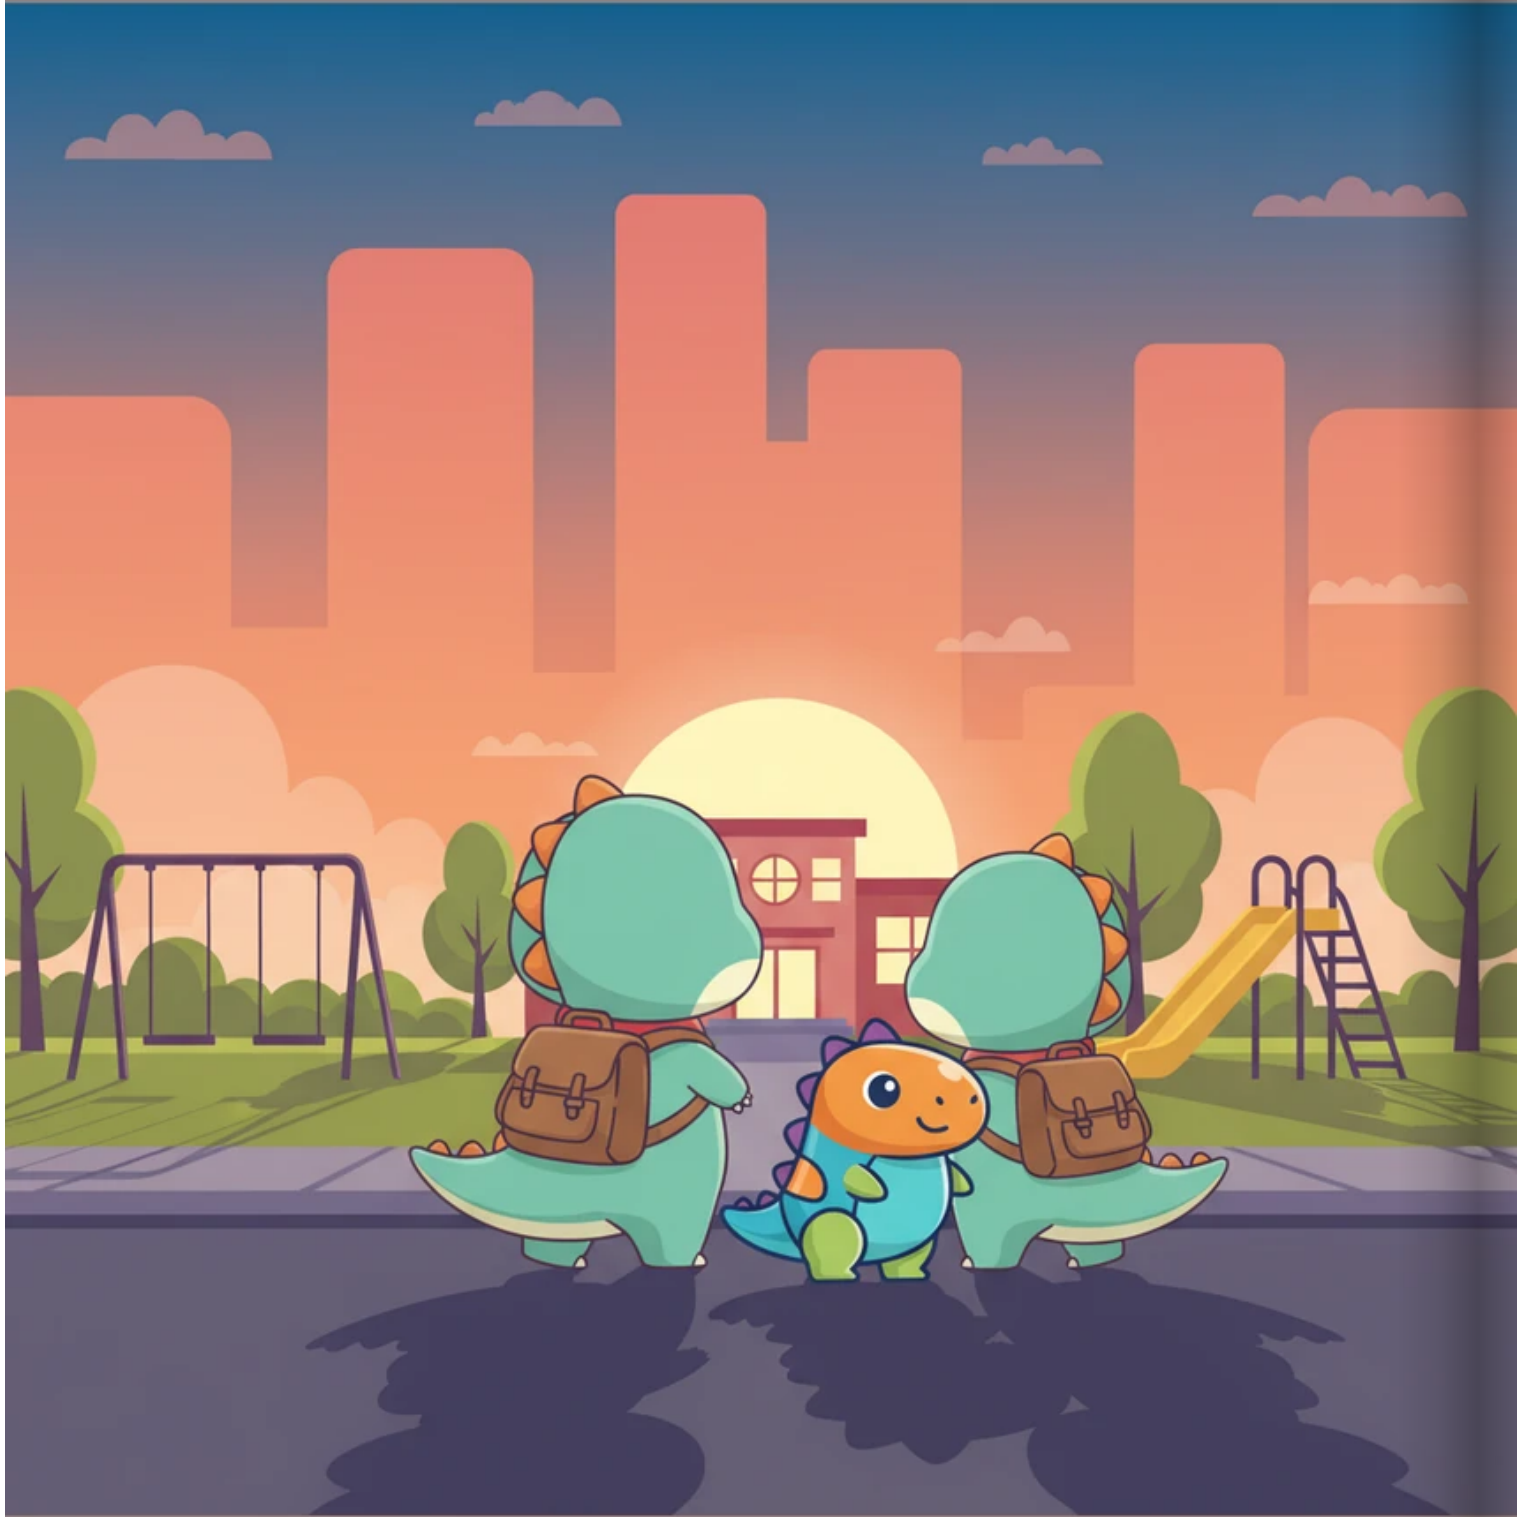

Dash uses his AAC to say 'My turn' when they start a new game of tag. My voice helps me play and makes sure everyone knows I am part of the team.

SNACK TIME ADVENTURES

At snack time, all the dinosaur friends sit together, some talking with words and some using gestures or sounds. Dash feels happy knowing that his friends understand him and value what he has to say.

As the sun sets on the school day, Dash hugs his AAC device and smiles at his friends. He is a brave communicator who knows that his voice, in all its forms, is a wonderful gift.
