

Imran's Raya Road Trip Adventure

Sashmar Onoprienko

The family car, bursting with excitement, zoomed down the highway towards their hometown for Hari Raya Aidilfitri. Suddenly, a lively Malik Kampung song filled the air from the radio, and everyone – Dad, Mom, big sister Aina, and little Imran – joined in, singing loudly with big smiles. Their joyful car karaoke was abruptly interrupted when Imran, bouncing in his seat, suddenly shrieked, "I need to pee NOW!"

Dad quickly spotted a sign for the Genting Sampah R&R and expertly turned the car into the bustling rest stop. As soon as the car stopped, Imran practically leaped out, holding his tiny hands in front of him. Dad, chuckling, swiftly led his son towards the restroom, while Mom and Aina, with a shared twinkle in their eyes, immediately began their quest for Granny's famous Raya cookies inside the shop.

After Imran's urgent mission was accomplished and a box of delicious cookies was secured, Mom and Dad found a quiet moment for their prayers in the clean, peaceful prayer room. Aina and Imran waited patiently, giggling softly as they shared a cookie. Soon, refreshed and ready, the family piled back into their car, resuming their delightful journey along the highway, the sweet anticipation of Raya filling the air once more.
