

RONY'S EPIC QUEST

Loading Level 1: Game On!

The Legendary Noob

Md Arshad

Rony wakes up in his messy bedroom, sunlight streaming through the window as he grabs his smartphone. With a determined grin, he declares to himself that today is the day he will land ten perfect headshots in his favorite game.

Rony puts on his colorful gaming headset and joins a lobby with his friends online. With a confident smirk, he tells his squad to sit back and watch because he plans to take down the entire enemy team all by himself.

The match begins, and Rony's character parachutes down toward the dangerous Peak area with a flashy, stylish dive. He ignores the nearby buildings, telling his friends that a true master doesn't need to waste time searching for loot when they have his level of skill.

He stands in the middle of an open field, striking a heroic pose while holding only a basic pistol. He boasts to his teammates over the voice chat that his raw talent is more than enough to handle any threat that comes his way.

Suddenly, an enemy player sneaks up from behind a large tree and fires a single, precise shot. Rony's character collapses instantly, and a bright red skull icon flashes across his phone screen to signal his defeat.

His friends' voices crackle through the headset, laughing and teasing him about his failed plan to wipe out the whole squad. Rony stares at the screen in disbelief, his face turning a bright shade of embarrassed red.

Rony quickly makes an excuse, claiming that his character only died because his internet connection suddenly started lagging. He shakes his phone and points at the Wi-Fi signal icon, trying to convince his friends it wasn't his fault.

They start a new match, and this time Rony looks incredibly focused, leaning forward with his eyes glued to the screen. He tells everyone in the squad to be completely silent so he can concentrate on the sound of enemy footsteps.

The room is dead quiet for a long moment until Rony suddenly jumps out of his chair, screaming "Enemy! Enemy! Enemy!" at the top of his lungs. His friends scramble in the game, spinning their characters around frantically to find the hidden threat.

When his confused friends ask where the enemy is hiding, Rony points sheepishly at the television in the corner of his room. It turns out the "enemy" was just a news report about a fictional battle, leaving his friends in fits of uncontrollable laughter.
