Mu Ryan

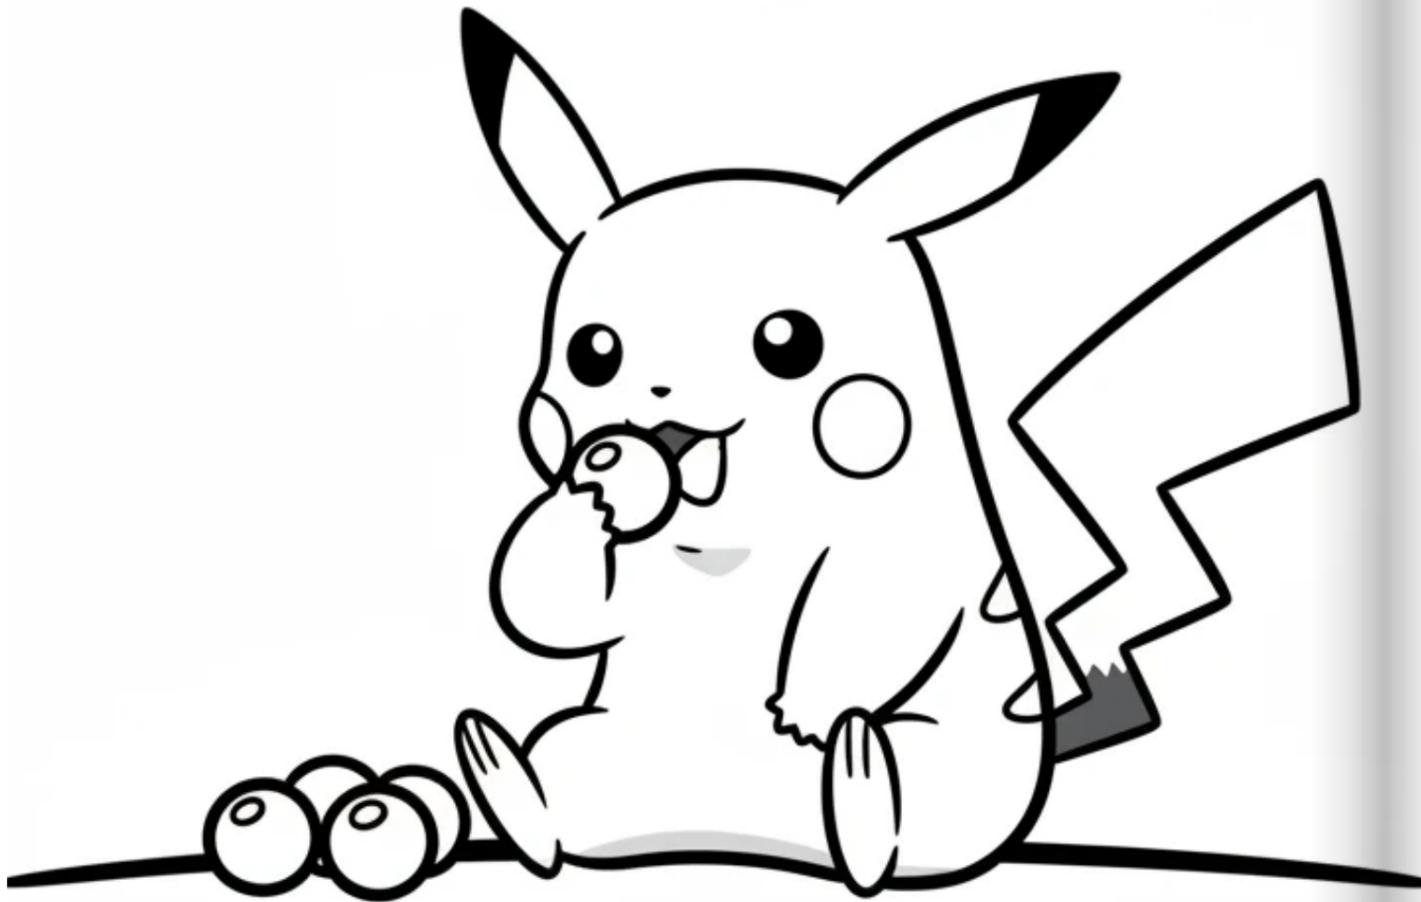

Leo woke up with a big smile. Today was a perfect day to learn about his favorite creatures: Pokémon! He bounced out of bed, eager to see what new friends he might discover. A simple drawing of a child (Leo) with a round head, two dots for eyes, a curved line for a smile, and messy hair. He is standing next to a simple bed, arms outstretched, looking happy. The background is a plain wall with a single window showing a sun.

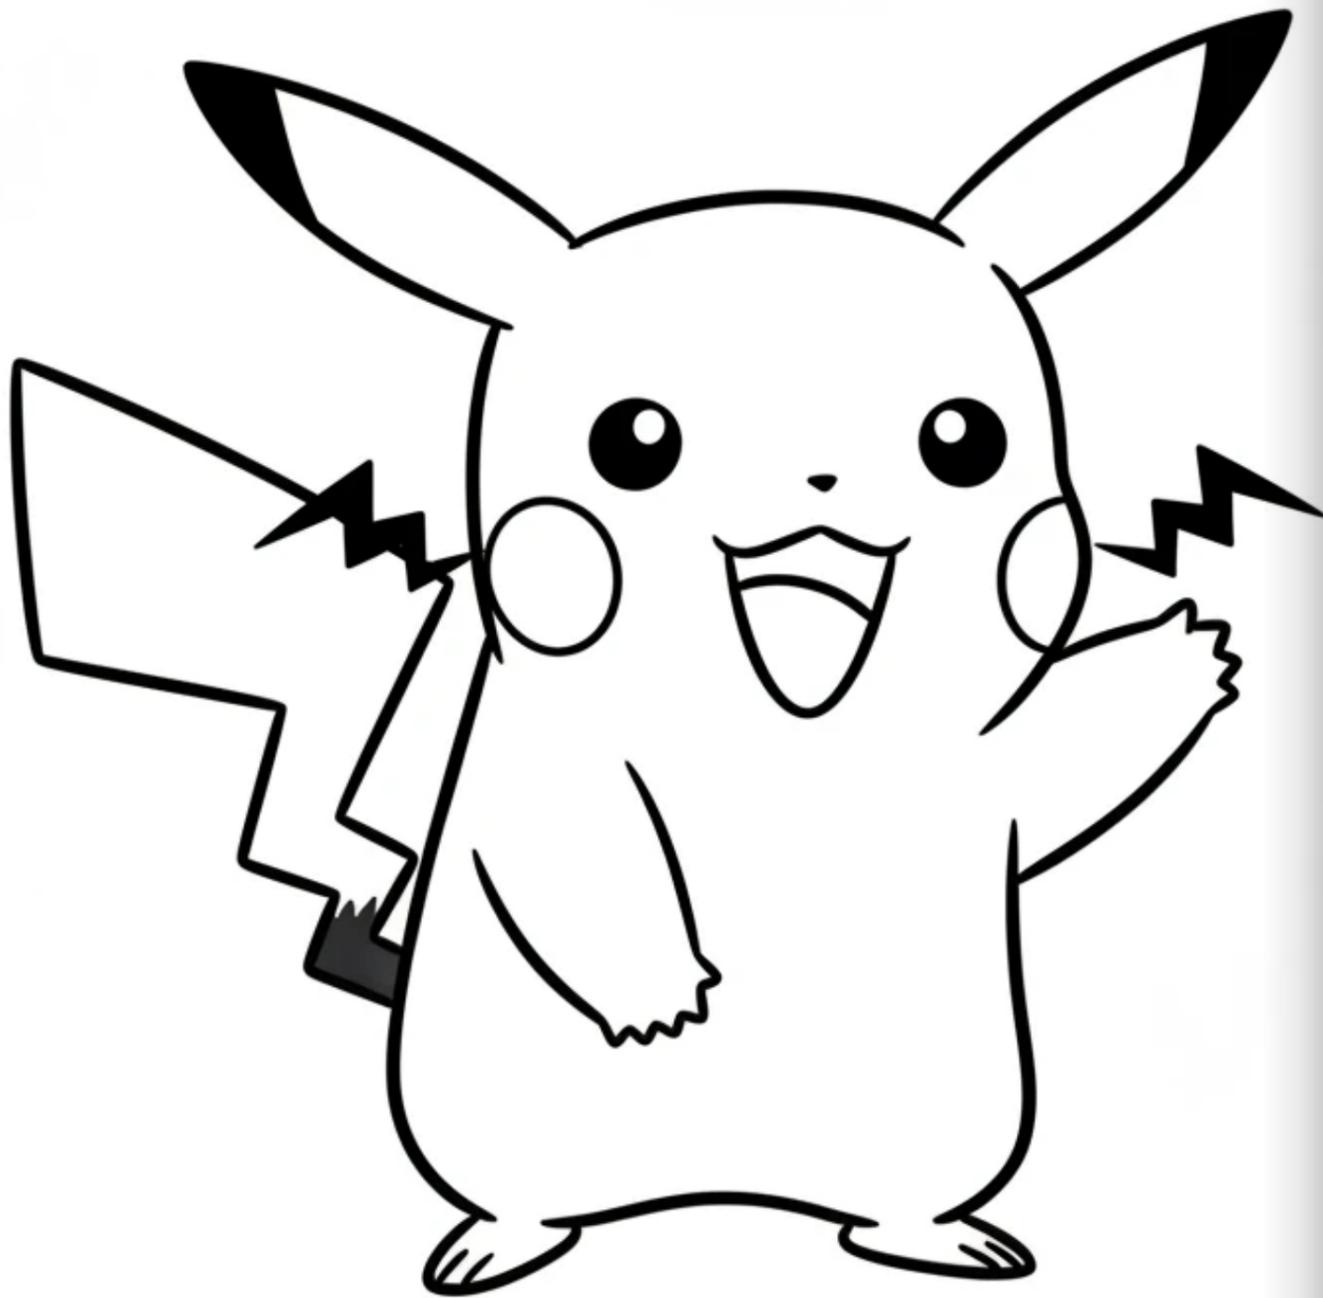

He peeked outside and gasped! A playful Pikachu was zipping through the tall grass, its tail wagging. Pikachu looked so cheerful, ready for a day of fun. Leo's head and shoulders are visible through a simple rectangular window. Outside, a very simple Pikachu shape, with two pointed ears, a zig-zag tail, and a round body, is depicted running through a few tall, curved lines representing grass.

Leo watched closely. "Pikachu is bright yellow," he whispered, "and it has two rosy red cheeks!" He loved how vibrant and energetic Pikachu looked, even from afar. A close-up, simple drawing of Pikachu's head and upper body. Its round head, two pointed ears with simple black tips, two small circles for eyes, a tiny curved line for a mouth, and two clear, bold circles on its cheeks. The body is a simple rounded shape.

Soon, Pikachu stopped to munch on some yummy berries it found. Leo learned that Pikachu loved to eat sweet, red berries to keep its energy up for playing all day. Pikachu is sitting on the ground, a simple round berry held up to its mouth by a simple curved arm. A few more simple berries are on the ground next to it. The ground is a single curved line.

Suddenly, Pikachu let out a happy "Pika!" and a little spark of electricity zapped from its cheeks! It was a tiny, exciting flash, showing its special power. Pikachu stands with its body slightly tilted. From its cheeks, two very simple, jagged lightning bolt shapes extend outwards, indicating a spark. Its mouth is an open 'O' shape.

"I want to draw Pikachu!" Leo declared. He grabbed his paper and a bold black crayon. He started with a big, round shape for Pikachu's head and body. A child's hand (Leo's hand, simple curved lines) holding a bold, simple crayon. The crayon is drawing a large, slightly oval circle on a blank sheet of paper, which is also a simple rectangle.

Next, Leo carefully added two pointy ears and a zig-zag tail. Now his drawing truly looked like his new friend, Pikachu, ready for adventures! The drawing on the paper now shows the basic circle with two simple, pointed ears (like triangles with rounded bases) on top and a simple zig-zag tail extending from the back.

"And when I color it," Leo thought, "Pikachu will be bright yellow with red cheeks!" He imagined filling in the lines with the perfect colors. The drawn Pikachu outline from the previous scene, but with two small circles drawn on its cheeks, indicating where the red color would go. A simple yellow crayon is shown next to the paper.

Just then, a little blue Squirtle waddled past the window, heading for a pond. Squirtle looked so cool with its strong shell and happy smile. Leo instantly wanted to learn about this new Pokémon too. A simple Squirtle shape. A rounded body with a shell indicated by a simple dome on its back. Four short legs, a simple tail curling up, and a round head with two simple eyes and a curved smile. It is walking towards a few wavy lines representing water.

Leo smiled, feeling full of joy. He had learned so much about Pikachu and now had a new friend, Squirtle, to discover. His day was filled with wonderful Pokémon learning and drawing fun! Leo's head and shoulders visible again, similar to Scene 2, but he is smiling broadly. Next to him, a simple drawing of Pikachu and Squirtle (their simplified forms) are floating in the air, like thought bubbles or happy memories.
