

Jack and the Beanstalk

Ilma Siddiqui

Jack and his mother were very poor. They had to sell their beloved cow, Milky-White, to buy food.

On the way to market, Jack met a mysterious old man who offered him magic beans in exchange for Milky-White. Jack excitedly agreed.

Jack's mother was furious when she discovered he'd traded their cow for beans! She threw them out the window in anger.

The next morning, a giant beanstalk had grown overnight, reaching high into the sky! Jack decided to climb it.

Jack climbed and climbed, higher and higher than he ever imagined. Finally, he reached the top and found himself in a strange land.

He discovered a huge castle where a giant lived. Jack peeked inside and saw the giant counting gold coins.

Jack crept into the castle and stole a bag of gold while the giant was napping. He quickly climbed back down the beanstalk.

The next day, Jack climbed the beanstalk again and stole a magical hen that laid golden eggs.

The giant woke up and chased Jack down the beanstalk. Jack chopped down the beanstalk with an axe.

The giant fell to the ground with a crash, and Jack and his mother lived happily ever after with their gold and golden eggs.