

Cristal and the Fruit of Desires

Leandro Pires

Cristal, a beautiful porcelain-skinned elf with long straight hair and heterochromia—one eye green, the other black—toils under the ruby and amethyst skies of a mystical world. As a mistreated slave on the purple earth, she watches the colored waters flow, dreaming of freedom.

Remembering an ancient legend, Cristal secretly uncovers a forbidden book stolen from the castle, which contains a map leading to a magical fruit capable of granting two wishes. Beside her stands her unique mystical bush dog, a bizarre yet loyal creature ready to protect her.

Deep within her dark fortress, the evil Queen Morgana, a tall, slender woman with youthful features but grey hair and pitch-black eyes, spies on Cristal through a glowing magical artifact. Furious that her book has been stolen, Morgana plots to stop the escapees before they reach the fruit.

Queen Morgana summons Erierf, a terrifying hunter from another dimension with stitched skin, a dark mouth twisted into a horrifying smile, and unsettling eyes. She commands this monstrous tracker to hunt down Cristal and her mystical companion across the parallel lines.

Cristal and her loyal bush dog sprint into the vibrant, bizarre wilderness, leaving their life of servitude behind as they follow the map's glowing paths. The strange plants and beautiful creatures of the realm seem to whisper warnings of the danger trailing close behind them.

As night falls beneath the shimmering gemstone sky, Cristal and her pet rest by a swirling, multi-colored river to decipher the next part of the map. Suddenly, the bush dog's ears perk up, sensing a dark, multidimensional presence tearing through the fabric of their world.

Erierf steps out from a rift in reality, his hideous stitched face illuminated by the amethyst glow as he spots his targets. Cristal grips her stolen book tightly, her green and black eyes widening in fear but hardening with newfound determination to survive.

A thrilling chase ensues across the purple terrain, with Cristal and her mystical dog leaping over glowing roots and strange rock formations to evade Erierf's grasp. The hunter's terrifying laughter echoes through the canyons, closing the distance with supernatural speed.

Cornered at the edge of a deep, sparkling canyon, Cristal uses a spell from the stolen book to trigger a bridge of pure light, crossing safely with her companion. Erierf is temporarily halted as the magical bridge vanishes, his horrifying smile turning into a snarl of rage.

Having escaped the immediate threat, Cristal and her unique bush dog look out toward the horizon where the powerful fruit awaits. An intriguing, mysterious energy pulses from the next realm, signaling that the true magic of their journey is just beginning.