

Everyday Heroes: The Good Habit Club

zena hassoun

Alex sits by his window and wonders about heroes. He thinks about big heroes from books with strong muscles and amazing powers. He wishes he could be a hero too.

Then Alex sees his friend, Lily. Lily always keeps her things neat and tidy. Her organized desk helps her find her pencils and papers very fast when it is time to draw.

Next, Alex sees Sam. Sam is always kind and helpful. He helps a younger student pick up a stack of books that fell on the floor, making the little student smile.

Maya is another friend. She loves to learn new things every day. Maya reads many books and shares interesting facts with everyone, making their lessons more fun.

Leo never gives up, even when things are hard. Alex watches Leo try to solve a tricky puzzle many times. Leo keeps trying until he finally fits the last piece perfectly.

Chloe always tells the truth, no matter what. One day, Chloe bravely speaks up when someone says something unfair about another student, making sure justice is served.

One sunny afternoon, the friends decide to make a special project for their school's 'Kindness Week.' They want to build a 'Kindness Tree' for the hallway, but it seems like a big task.

Lily quickly organizes all their craft supplies into neat piles. Sam shares his creative ideas and encourages everyone to do their best. Maya researches how to make strong branches for their tree.

Leo carefully builds the tree's frame, fixing it patiently when a piece breaks. Chloe makes sure every friend's idea for decorating the tree is heard and valued.

Their 'Kindness Tree,' filled with notes of kindness from students, stands tall and beautiful in the hall. Alex understands now. His friends are true heroes, making the world better every day with their good habits.
