

Barnaby the Giant and the Musical Chairs

L. CARTER

High above the rolling hills, Barnaby the giant could hear delightful sounds. He heard the tinkling laughter and joyful glee of children playing far below. He watched them skip and twirl by his enormous feet, a happy dance in the sunshine.

Barnaby wondered if they would ever play with him. Gently, he knelt down on one mighty knee, his voice a soft rumble. "Would you like to play a game with me?" he asked, his eyes twinkling.

The children looked up, startled at first, then their surprise turned into giggles. "Oh, what fun that would be!" they cheered. Barnaby beamed, "I have a favorite game! It's called musical chairs. Let's play!"

With a mighty but careful hand, Barnaby arranged several colossal chairs in a circle. The children watched with wide, amazed eyes. As the music began to play, they all danced with tiny steps around his giant feet, full of anticipation.

The music suddenly stopped! Barnaby, quick as a wink, sat down in one of the enormous chairs. He looked around, puzzled, realizing he was the only one seated; the chairs were far too big for the children to reach.

Barnaby thought for a moment, then a brilliant idea sparked in his mind! He found four small, colorful chairs, just the right size. He restarted the music, and the children began to dance with renewed energy.

When the music stopped again, everyone scrambled for a seat! Oh dear, little Terrell missed a chair and was out, but he giggled all the same. The game was truly on!

The music started once more, and another chair was removed. They danced even faster! When the music paused, everyone rushed. Two more children didn't find a seat, but they clapped and cheered for their friends.

Two more chairs were taken away, leaving only one tiny seat. The music started and stopped so quickly! Everyone scrambled, and with a comical 'BOOM,' Barnaby tried to sit, but the little chair was much too small for him! He tumbled gently, out of the game!

The children erupted in cheers and laughter, shouting with glee! They jumped onto Barnaby's soft tummy, bouncing high in the air with every joyful rumble he made. It was the most wonderful, bouncy, happy ending imaginable.
