by zaki almani

Diana skipped into the school, her bright smile lighting up the hallway. Her red hair bounced as she greeted her friends, ready for another exciting day. The classroom buzzed with anticipation, filled with the promise of new lessons and adventures.

In class, Diana loved to learn! She eagerly raised her hand, answering questions with enthusiasm and a twinkle in her eye. The teacher praised her for her dedication and kindness, making Diana feel proud.

During playtime, Diana and her friends raced across the playground, laughing as they played tag. They built magnificent sandcastles, sharing secrets and dreams under the warm sun. Diana's laughter echoed through the air.

One day, the class went on a field trip to a beautiful farm. Diana marveled at the animals, learning about the world beyond the classroom. She carefully observed everything and asked curious questions.

Back in the classroom, Diana helped her classmates with their projects. She shared her crayons and offered words of encouragement, always willing to lend a helping hand. Her kindness created a warm atmosphere.

At the end of the day, Diana walked home with a skip in her step, feeling happy and fulfilled. She knew that every day at school was a chance to learn, grow, and share the joy of friendship.
