

Pamuk's Mountain Journey

by Pamu Fuad

Pamuk, a beautiful horse with a flowing mane, lived in a small village nestled in the heart of the majestic Kurdistan mountains. She loved to roam the green hills, but today she was worried. Something precious to her, her favorite red scarf, was missing.

The sun rose over the snow-capped peaks as Pamuk set out on her quest. Her ears perked up, her eyes scanning every rock and bush. The village children waved goodbye, wishing her luck on her journey to find her lost item.

Pamuk followed a winding mountain path, the air growing crisp and cool. Along the way, she met a wise old owl perched on a branch. The owl told her she might find the scarf near the rushing waterfalls.

She bravely navigated the steep cliffs and roaring waterfalls, her determination never wavering. Pamuk encountered playful mountain goats and colorful birds, each offering a word of encouragement.

Finally, near a sparkling waterfall, she spotted it! Her red scarf, caught on a thorny bush. With a joyful neigh, Pamuk gently retrieved her treasure.

Pamuk, her heart full, triumphantly returned to her village, the red scarf waving in the wind. She was greeted with cheers, proving that courage, and a bit of perseverance, can conquer any challenge.
