

Tuga's Journey Home

by Susy Vivas

The big storm roared, and little Tuga was swept away from her family. Waves crashed all around, making her small shell bob like a tiny boat. Fear filled her heart as she drifted further and further from the familiar shore.

Suddenly, Tuga met Pico, a curious fish with shimmering scales. Pico taught her not to be afraid of the dark depths. He showed her how to find the shimmering sunlight filtering through the water, a guiding star.

As the sun began to set, Tuga saw Luna, a kind seagull, soaring above. Luna told her to never give up, that love would always guide her home. Luna's words filled Tuga with hope.

The waves grew stronger, and Tuga felt lost again, until she met Cris, a funny crab. Cris showed her how to move sideways, navigating the powerful currents. Tuga learned to use her strength and determination.

Following the direction of the setting sun, Tuga swam and swam until she saw a familiar sight. The shoreline, her home, became visible in the distance. Her heart leaped with joy.

Finally, Tuga reached the shore, and there were her family, waiting for her! Surrounded by love, she knew that no matter what, her family would always be her home, and love would always guide her back.
