

Sam and the Lonely Dragon

by lianbo ma

The village of Oakhaven was in constant fear. High on the mountain lived a dragon, and its roars echoed through the valley. Sam, a small but courageous knight, decided something had to be done to protect his home from the scary dragon.

The image shows a small, determined knight named Sam, standing at the foot of a tall, imposing mountain. The village of Oakhaven is nestled safely in the valley below, its houses looking small and vulnerable.

With a brave heart, Sam began his climb. The path was steep and winding, and the wind howled around him. Despite his fear, he kept going, determined to discover the truth about the dragon that lived on the mountain.

The illustration depicts Sam struggling up the rocky path. He is looking up at the summit of the mountain, where a cave entrance can be seen. The dragon's shadow looms on the mountain, creating a sense of foreboding.

Finally, Sam reached the dragon's cave. He crept inside, his sword drawn, ready for a fight. Instead, he found a large, golden dragon, its head resting sadly on its claws.

The image reveals the interior of the dragon's cave. The dragon is not fierce, but rather appears lonely and forlorn. The cave is filled with treasures, but the dragon seems uninterested.
