

InvestiGators: Class Action

by Law Fy

Mango and Brash, dressed in surprisingly stylish V.E.S.T. uniforms, stand awkwardly outside the imposing gates of Middle School. The school bell rings, and students swarm past them, chattering excitedly. Mango adjusts his tie, while Brash discreetly checks his special spy backpack for any clues they might need.

Inside the bustling school, Mango and Brash try to blend in with the other students. Mango struggles to fit in with the other students in home economics while Brash, ever observant, scans the room, his eyes darting from face to face. A suspicious-looking lunch lady gives them the side-eye.

During a chaotic gym class, the school mascot, a fluffy badger, is nearly kidnapped! Mango and Brash spring into action, their training kicking in. They chase the would-be kidnappers through the gymnasium, dodging basketballs and gym mats, revealing their true identities to everyone.

Back in their classroom, they discover a series of coded messages hidden in the school's yearbook. Mango, drawing on his knowledge of the school's history, begins to decipher the codes. Brash uses his sharp skills, making connections between the clues.

Following the clues, Mango and Brash find themselves in the school's old, abandoned boiler room. The air is thick with dust and mystery. They find a secret, hidden passage and realize that Mango's family might be in danger!

In a final showdown, Mango and Brash confront the true culprit behind the mascot kidnapping and the coded messages. With teamwork and quick thinking, they solve the case and save the day, but will Brash pass Home Economics? The mystery continues...