

The Unicorns' Tea Party

by M Andrews

Barnaby and Bartholomew, two unicorn brothers with shimmering coats and playful eyes, lived in a cozy cottage nestled in a field of wildflowers. The sun always seemed to shine on their little home, making the flowers bloom in vibrant colors. They loved to spend their days playing and laughing together.

One sunny afternoon, Barnaby suggested a tea party. Bartholomew, always eager for fun, immediately agreed. They gathered their favorite teacups, a little teapot, and a plate of delicious berry cakes from the kitchen, ready to start their lovely afternoon tea.

They set up their tea party under a large oak tree, its leaves providing a cool, shady spot. Barnaby carefully poured the tea, while Bartholomew arranged the cakes. The air filled with the sweet scent of berries and the gentle clinking of teacups.

Suddenly, a little squirrel, looking lost, scampered into their tea party. Barnaby and Bartholomew, always kind, invited him to join them. The squirrel, delighted, accepted and nibbled on a tiny cake.

As they sipped tea and shared stories, a playful breeze rustled the leaves, and a family of bluebirds landed nearby, chirping happily. The unicorns smiled, happy to share their tea party with their new friends. They were pleased to have their company.

As the sun began to set, painting the sky with warm colors, the tea party came to an end. Barnaby and Bartholomew, along with their new friends, promised to have many more tea parties together, filled with joy and friendship, in the days to come.
